Copenhagen is celebrating its 800th birthday this year. Shown here is a horse drawn dray from Tuborg in front of the Danish Supreme Court in Copenhagen. The building is part of the Christiansborg Palace where the Parliament is located.

Danish law enjoys a remarkably unbroken history. While it is not founded on either Roman or common law, it derives from sources that are peculiarly Danish. National legislation can be traced with certainty to around the year 1200. A democratic constitution replaced autocracy in 1849.

The 15 judge Supreme Court is the highest court of appeals in Denmark. Five judges must sit in each case so the court usually can hear cases in more than one division. It has jurisdiction in civil, criminal and administrative cases.

You will learn that at the start of any Polynesian performance the sounding of the conch shell and the chanting of Meles are important symbols. I have been assigned the pleasant duty of sounding the shell at this luncheon, with the hope that you may have some understanding of some of the less obvious aspects of the complicated tapestry that makes up our true Hawaiian beauty.

I hope that when I have concluded you will find that the horn that I have blown is not necessarily my own, nor am I the hero of all the cases referred to. Physiologists tell us that the human tongue is the most enduring muscle of the body and my problem was to bring within some reasonable compass reflections on practice of law in the Islands in the last 38 years.

I would like to open my remarks by referring to Trustee Bernard Segal's beautiful invocation previously given to one of the sections of the American Bar Association:

"... May the harmony of Nature's widest contrasts of sea and mountain, which Thou has created on this enchanting island, and the harmony which we see here among peoples of diverse history and race, inspire us to live in harmony with each other and with our fellowmen everywhere, to resolve the conflicts which torment our civilization, and to strive for a society in which all men will come to know Thee and to advance Thy kingdom on earth..."

When I arrived in Hawaii I had the feeling that I was about to practice in courts of "ideal jurisdiction." There were at that time only 30 volumes of printed Hawaiian Reports and a collection of four volumes of cases decided in the United States District Court, and statutory law numbered less than 2,000 pages. The earliest printed law in the Sandwich Islands was printed in the 1820's and the first printed Hawaiian Law Report is dated in 1857.

Also, from the very organization of our court system the law had vague roots in the common law of England; but by 1892, in effect, the common law of England, as ascertained by the English and American decisions, was declared to be the common law of Hawaii except as otherwise fixed by Hawaiian judicial precedent or established by Hawaiian usage.

It must be obvious that in a jurisdiction that has so little established binding precedent and so few statutes there was opportunity for ingenuity and creative work in the development of Hawaiian common law, and the period during the last 38 years has been a fruitful one in which to participate actively in the growing process which necessarily took place.

One of the matters that is only roughly related to common law is the ancient usage with respect to water in Hawaii. As you would expect, with the development of a tremendous sugar industry and with a large population increase, the ownership of water in Hawaii is valuable property and controversies have been acute.

The Hawaiian system for the determination of the rights to surface water is unique and any understanding of the water law involves a knowledge of the history of land ownership in Hawaii. The King was the owner of all the lands in the kingdom and before the great division of land, known as the Great Mahele, in 1848, the lands had been allotted to inferior chiefs who, in turn, reallocated them according to a well-understood but undocumented tenure. Thus, there was a sort of feudal tenure from the King through as many as four, five or six persons to the lowest class of tenant, all on a revocable basis. With the arrival of foreigners in the early part of the 19th century and the desire for diplomatic recognition and acceptance into the community of nations there came eventually the enactment of a Bill of Rights and Constitution, and ultimately a surrender by the King of great portions of his royal domain to the chiefs and the common people in what is called the Great Mahele.

Let me refer to a case involving a beautiful broad valley located on this Island of Oahu. A distinguished Harvard professor in his "Road to Zanadu" said: "The power that has wrought the facts into the fabric of a vision outlasts both." I will deal with the Hawaii condemnation case which worked its way to the Supreme Court of the United States. The dead bones of fact are reported in 298 U.S. 343 (McCandless v. U.S.).

In this case the United States Navy in 1930, perhaps with a cloudy crystal ball directed toward the Pearl Harbor raid of December 7, 1941, condemned for an underground ammunition depot one of the broadest valleys on the Waianae side of Oahu northwest of Pearl Harbor. The condemned tract measured three and one half miles across and was two miles deep. The issue that haunted the trial was whether the United States could value the land principally as pasture or ranch land and thereby prevent the landowner from showing that it had a far greater value as potential sugar cane land, for which it was suitable if it had water brought to it.

The trial in the United States District Court before a jury lasted for some two and a half months. The judge limited the testimony as to the use of the land to the uses which involved only the resources available on the land itself. This involved the detailed investigation and proof of pineapple cultivation, avocado cultivation and ranching as practiced in Hawaii. The trial judge permitted testimony as to water resources within the land itself, including a detailed geological study, but he refused to allow the landowner to show or even suggest to the jury that the land was potential sugar cane land if the water, which the landowner had available at a distance from the land, could be economically brought on to the land. The jury verdict reflected this restricted valuation.

That we then lived in a more leisurely age is demonstrated by the fact that I was able to arouse the interest of the Supreme Court in our petition for the certiorari based on a plea that the trial judge's rulings on the scope of the testimony raised serious due process problems and deprived the landowner of just compensation. The briefs in the United States Supreme Court (that I have looked at for the first time in many years) contain a report of the Department of Commerce which pays tribute to the somewhat unique irrigation systems in Hawaii. The report supported the factual conclusions we were asserting by concluding that Hawaiian plantations justifiably have earned the reputation of being "the most daring and successful land reclaimers in the world" (the report is dated 1917). The case was an introduction for me not only into Hawaiian agriculture, but water —water geology, tunnels, ditches, artesian wells, flumes, pumps and reservoirs that have converted on this fair island useless brush and pasture lands into some of the most successful scientifically cultivated agricultural lands in the world. I still believe that certiorari was granted in part because of the romantic allure of the record, including the melodious Hawaiian names. In fact, when I was arguing the case before the Court with large maps spread out, visually demonstrating that without water being brought there could never have been sugar plantations in the Islands (except for certain areas on the Island of Hawaii), the Justices were not only moved by the Hawaiian sugar story, but they were enchanted by the Hawaiian place names: Honouliuli, Nanakuli Valley, Helekala Ridge, and the valley itself—Lualualei. "Lualua" means "rough, uneven, old, wrinkled" and "lei" means a "garland or an adornment."

The Assistant Attorney General who argued for the government had not been instructed on the ease of pronouncing the phonetically spelled Hawaiian names loaded with romantic meaning as well as sound. He kept referring to the land as "Lualua-whatever-it-is" to the amusement of the Court. The Supreme Court, as you have surmised, held in what has become a leading case, that the landowner could not be deprived of the right to have the value of the land determined for its highest and best use, which included its potential use as sugar land.

Besides the necessity of knowing the lands intimately, the case resulted in some pleasant personal relations with landowners who had a reputation for giving unforgettable old fashioned luaus in the ancient Hawaiian manner, using their "paniolos" or Hawaiian cowboys and their families for music, serving and dancing.

Another case I was involved in was tried in a setting that is hard to forget. The controversy affected the division of water on one of the wettest valleys on the Island of Kauai. I and my wife occupied a cottage on the beautiful Poipu Beach, and in our cottage we had established a subsidiary law office with several rooms devoted to water reports, a collection of the Hawaiian Reports, and the voluminous files that had been built up over a period of 50 years. The cottage provided a conference room for interviews with witnesses. Another cottage immediately adjoining was assigned to my able young assistant with his wife and their two children and the engineer employed by our client who was compiling important statistical and hydrological information. The trial was before the Circuit Judge sitting in Lihue 30 minutes away who sat in his capacity as a statutory Water Commissioner, adjudicating water rights. The trial gave us a familiarity in depth with the beautiful Garden Isle, as Kauai is known.

I can't resist telling you about one of my favorite opinions in the Hawaiian Reports in which I did not participate because it was decided in 1863. (You will find this in 2 Haw. 707.)

The very tenuous relevance of this case to our guided tour is that you will undoubtedly visit the historic Lahaina, Maui, where Herman Melville once lived and where the greatest aggregation of whaling ships used to congregate before the discovery of oil in Pennsylvania. If you go to Lahaina in the late fall you will still see, in addition to the beautiful seascapes and the view of Lanai and Molokai, schools of whales which regularly appear.

The case I refer to arose out of a controversy in the "Ochotsk Seas" where amidst floating ice two whaling ships made claim to a whale. The first ship had been able to get a large number of harpoons into this whale, but by ten o'clock at night was not able to reduce it to possession. Early next morning a second whaler discovered the harpooned but loose whale, apparently further injured the whale, but the first whaling ship which was out bright and early to finish the catch, reduced the whale to possession. The whaling captains agreed to see each other in court in Honolulu, and our own Justice Robertson, sitting as an admiralty court, in a highly readable opinion came to the conclusion that the English common law relating to ferae naturae was not applicable to a case arising on the high sea. The court decided that since the chances were that the whale would never have been caught at all without the help of the second whaling bark, which was the libellant, he decreed that the whale would be the joint prize of both ships and that “seventy-five barrels of good bowhead oil and one thousand pounds of whalebone, of at least medium size,” should be delivered to the libellant.

Our one-time resident, Herman Melville, had occasion some 20 years before this whale case was decided, to include in his Moby Dick a famous chapter on whaling law called “Fast-Fish and Loose-Fish.” In this chapter an English case is referred to, decided by Lord Ellenborough, illustrating the harshness of the common law which the Hawaiian court refused to follow. Melville’s picturesque description of Lord Erskine’s argument in the English case seems somehow relevant to the present State of Hawaii which has become a tourist paradise. This is Melville’s summary of Erskine:

“[In] a recent crim. con. case, wherein a gentleman, after in vain trying to bridle his wife’s viciousness, had at last abandoned her upon the sea of life; but in the course of years, repenting of that step, he instituted an action to recover possession of her. Erskine was on the other side; and he then supported it by saying, that though the gentleman had originally harpooned the lady, and had once had her fast, and only by reason of the great stress of her plunging viciousness, had at last abandoned her; yet abandon her he did, so that she became a loose-fish; and therefore when a subsequent gentleman reharpooned her, the lady then became that subsequent gentleman’s property, along with whatever harpoon might have been found sticking in her.”

I need only add that Erskine’s argument prevailed with Lord Ellenborough.

Let me close my remarks and call a halt to that most enduring muscle by quoting Mark Twain’s famous prose poem about Hawaii which expresses much the same nostalgia that I felt about Pike County, Pennsylvania with its laurel and rhododendrons:

“No other land could so longingly and so beseeingly haunt me sleeping and waking through half a life time... For me its balmy airs are always blowing, its summer seas flashing in the sun; the pulsing of its surf-beat is in my ears; I can see its garlanded crags; its leaping cascades; its plumy palms drowsing by the shore; its remote summits floating like islands above the cloud rack!! I can feel the spirit of its woodland solitudes, I can hear the splash of its brooks. In my nostrils still lives the breath of flowers that perished twenty years ago.”

With the close of the 1966-67 school term, the Placement Office at the Law School observed its fifth anniversary as a separate and distinct function of the Law School administration. A five year life at the Law School does not inbed an institution so firmly into the fabric of law school life that its functions need not be explained. Most Law School alumni are unfamiliar with the Placement Office and, indeed, with the methods of hiring practiced by law firms in more recent years. While the task of finding a job after leaving law school has confronted most every graduate, the method by which that task is accomplished has changed considerably in the last decade. It was this new evolutionary stage of hiring procedure which necessitated the institution of the Placement Office at the Law School.

We often hear of the law school graduate of years ago who pounded the pavements, knocked on doors, and frequently suffered discouragement in his pursuit of post graduate employment. The newly graduated student considered himself fortunate to be given office space and a desk, financial remuneration being a secondary consideration if it existed at all. The early years of law practice constituted a period of apprenticeship for the law graduate during which time... he sat at the feet of his elders, absorbing what he could of their learning, experience and wisdom. The law student sought the position; the position did not seek the student.

A far different situation faces the graduating law school student today. He is pursued, pampered and propagandized by scores of recruiters who are trying to fill jobs which pay the student handsomely while he develops into an effective, experienced attorney. In the Fall of his third year, a veritable army of recruiters descend upon the school looking for young men to fill available spaces among their rosters of attorneys. In the first year of Placement Office existence a total of 53 law firms, government agencies and corporations interviewed applicants at the Law School. That number has since tripled. During the 1966-67 school term, a total of 141 interviewers came to the Law School representing, coincidentally, law firms located in 17 states, 17 government agencies and 17 corporations. The most dynamic growth was shown in the number of corporate interviewers, of which there were two in the Placement Office’s first year and 17 last year. In the typical cases, recruiters will hold twenty minute or half hour interviews throughout the course of one or two days during which time they speak with those who may be interested in the jobs they are trying to fill. Last year, for example, the Placement Office arranged approximately 2600 interviews for second and third year students. These interviews are concentrated in the months of October and November, a period not entirely facetiously referred to by students as the “Mating Season.”

In addition to interviewing third year students seeking permanent employment, recruiters have shown an increasing interest in interviewing second year students for summer employment. This new development is beneficial from the standpoint of the employer and the student. It gives the law firm an opportunity to assess the capabilities of a student during an extended period in the context of legal practice. Just as important, second year employment gives the student an opportunity to evaluate not only the specific firm for which he is working but also the kind of practice in which that firm engages. As a side benefit, after two years of academic experience with the law, the second year student frequently finds himself reinvigorated and his interest in the law renewed by everyday contacts with actual legal problems confronted by the practicing lawyer.

Out of these interviews come a wide diversity of employment opportunity within the general area of the law. Due to the conflict in Vietnam, however, a large number of students must first fulfill their obligation to the military. Of the 185 students who graduated in 1965-66, 46 joined one of the military branches. This was an increase of 31 over the previous year. This number decreased in last year’s graduating class, reflecting, perhaps, an increased number of married men who are coming to the Law School. Excepting the military, graduating students headed in greatest number (almost one-half of the class) into private practice in states throughout the country. A significant development in post-graduate employment has been in the number of judicial clerkships taken by graduating students. In

LAW SCHOOL RENOVATION

If the general commotion surrounding 34th and Chestnut is any indication, demolition of the Law School interior which began August 17, 1967 is proceeding according to schedule. However, it is still too early to tell if the project will be completed ahead of the 610 day contract.

LUNCHEON PLANNED FOR JANUARY 25

The Law Alumni Society will have a luncheon at the Penn-Harris Hotel in Harrisburg on Thursday, January 25 during the annual Pennsylvania Bar Association meeting in Harrisburg.
September 21, 1967

Dear Jeff:

Once again it is a pleasure to report to you the results of the Law School Alumni Annual Giving Campaign. Total giving reached a new record high of $105,454, which is $3,293 more than last year's total of $102,124.64. This represents an increase of 3.2%. This year 1,905 alumni contributed to the campaign, which is a decrease of 15, or less than 1%, from last year's high of 1,920. Overall participation also showed a slight dip of less than 1% to 42%.

As I have now completed my fifth year as General Chairman, I feel it is time to say farewell and turn the Chair over to a new leader. In doing so, let me say that it has been a most rewarding five years. It has not only been a great pleasure working with you and our extraordinary group of alumni, but I have found great personal satisfaction in trying to be of some assistance to the Law School, a unique and most deserving institution.

On behalf of my associated chairmen and all who worked on the campaign, I wish to extend best wishes to you and your colleagues for great success in all your future campaigns.

Sincerely,

Edwin H. Burgess
Dean of the Law School

Dear Ed:

I was delighted to receive, and I accept with great pleasure, your final report of the 1966-67 Law School Alumni Annual Giving Campaign. $105,454 is indeed an impressive record, it is all the more impressive when you realize that this represents the equivalent of more than $2,100,000 of Capital Funds yielding 5%. As you know, these funds constitute badly needed support for important educational and research activities.

The Law School will always be indebted to you for your superb service as General Chairman for Alumni Annual Giving. Under your leadership we have seen Annual Giving rise from $63,400 to its present level of $105,454. During your five years a total of $440,000 has been contributed. This is indeed a fine record.

On behalf of the Law School, I express my deepest thanks most especially to you and also to your excellent team of vice-chairmen; Morris Wexler, Benjamin Franklin Associates Chairman; Paul Helmey, William Pepper Scott Association Chairman; Louis J. Lippman, Century Club Chairman; Hilton B. Garner, Class Agent Chairman; and J. Pennington Straus, Chairman for Regions, as well as to each class agent and regional chairman, for devoted and fruitful service.

Sincerely,

Edwin H. Burgess
Dean of the Law School

COPRORATE GIFT PROGRAM

A record total of 25 forward-looking companies matched gifts to 1966-67 Alumni Annual Giving of Law alumni employees, officers and directors. Presently there are over 300 corporations who have a plan for matching gifts to schools and universities. The Alumni Office will be glad to supply information to any alumnus who may be in a position to influence the establishment of a matching gift plan in his company.

The names of corporate donors who have participated in this year’s Law School Annual Giving Program are listed below. These corporations have generously matched, wholly or in part, the gifts of our alumni in their employ. The number of the companies and the amount received from them increased significantly again this year as more join the matching gift program.

Alumni who are eligible to have their gift matched are urged to send in their company’s form in order that the Law School may benefit from it. The matching amount is also credited to you, your class and your region.

The nineteenth Law School Alumni Annual Giving Campaign was officially launched on Saturday, November 4th. About forty alumni and guests were undaunted by the threatening weather and attended the kickoff meeting and luncheon followed by the Penn-Harvard football game.

The meeting was highlighted by the introduction of the new Annual Giving Chairmen: Robert Dechert, L'26, the new General Chairman; Kenneth Souser, L'30, the new Benjamin Franklin Associates Chairman; Milton B. Garner, L'36, the new Century Club Chairman; and Henry T. Reath, L'48, the new Class Agent Chairman. Serving again this year are Paul Maloney, L'33, as William Draper Lewis Associates Chairman and J. Pennington Straus, L'35, Regional Chairman.

Mr. Dechert announced that this year's goal is $120,000, up $5,000 from last year's goal. He feels that the goal is within reach, but he urged his Chairmen to strive for a higher percentage of participation in Annual Giving.

Dean Fordham praised James D. Evans, who is leaving the Law School to work in the University of Pennsylvania Bequest Program, for his excellent work in the past, and welcomed his replacement, Alexander A. Zvegintzov, Esq.

At the luncheon in the Horace Stern Hall following the meeting, Dean Fordham presented Mr. Burgess a token of appreciation for his devotion and assistance and Mr. Burgess made presentations to his Vice Chairmen. Mr. Burgess also presented the Class Performance Awards to the following Class Agents: Knox Henderson, '31, for the Greatest Number of Dollars contributed; E. Barclay Cale, '62, for the Greatest Number of Contributors and also for the Highest Percent Participation, (classes of 25 or more); and to Stanley Root, '07, for the Highest Percent Participation, (classes of less than 25).

BURGESS RETIRES URGING GREATER PARTICIPATION IN ANNUAL GIVING

EDWIN H. BURGESS, '14, has retired after five years as General Chairman for Law School Annual Giving. He believes that a critical part of his successor's job will be to increase alumni participation in future campaigns.

He emphasizes that the Law School depends on its alumni to provide funds to supplement its University allocation, which funds are essential if it is to continue its remarkable growth as an outstanding institution. The funds are used to support and develop the backbone of the Law School; student and faculty research; the Law Review and the Library. These are the elements which determine the greatness of a Law School.

He pointed out that, "assuming last year's average gift as $55, if alumni participation had been 50% instead of 42%, the total giving would have been $124,000, a substantial margin over our goal. I therefore urge greater participation among alumni in all future campaigns."

Distinguished Service Award

An important and prestigious award had been instituted by the Board of Managers of the Law Alumni Society so that particular recognition might be given to our singular alumni and faculty. Called the Distinguished Service Award, it will be given to present or past faculty members or alumni "whose professional careers demonstrate those qualities of character, intellect and social and professional responsibility which the Law School nurtures." While the award might coincidentally recognize service to the Law School, its essence is recognition of a vastly broader range of excellence.

In a welcome departure from convention, the Board of Managers has dispensed with the ubiquitous medal or plaque. Instead, the Award will be in the form of a work of art. This year the plan is to commission an artist to do a print, the original of which will be presented to the recipient of the award with a copy given to the Law School. Subsequent awards, and they need not be made annually, might be in the form of statuary or bronzes.

The alumni are urged to submit names of prospective candidates to the Award Selection Committee which consists of the two immediate past presidents of the society, two members of the Board of Managers of the Society and three other members chosen from the membership of the society. The award will be presented on Law Alumni Day.

Boyd Lee Spahr, of Philadelphia, was honored by Dickinson College at the dedication of the Boyd Lee Spahr Library which was named for him.

1914

Frank H. Mancill, of Philadelphia, has become associated with the firm of Dechert, Price & Rhoads as counsel.

Mark T. Minor, of Harrisburg, was honored at a recognition dinner for his 34 years as solicitor for the Harrisburg School District.

Judge Louis E. Levinthal, of Philadelphia Common Pleas Court No. 5, was recently guest speaker at the ceremonies following the swearing in of a group of new U.S. citizens. His remarks focused on the power of the individual’s vote and the importance of the educated vote.

Judge Leo Weinrott, of Philadelphia Common Pleas Court No. 5, was appointed a national chairman of a committee of Masons, planning a multi-million dollar international peace shrine in Jerusalem.

David F. Maxwell, of Philadelphia, Pa., former ABA president and present member of the PBA House of Delegates, now Chairman of the PBA House of Delegates, actively participated in the ABA meeting in Honolulu.

1931

Bernard G. Segal and Richard P. Brown, Jr., ’48, of Philadelphia and Emanuel G. Scoblionko, ’34, of Allentown, Pa., President of the Lehigh County Bar Association represented Pennsylvania at the July 9-14 Geneva World Conference on World Peace Through Law.

State Senator Preston B. Davis, has been elected to a five year term on the Board of Directors of Susquehanna University.

State Supreme Court Justice Samuel J. Roberts, of Erie, Pa., gave the principal address at a testimonial dinner for Judge Samuel H. Jubelirer.

1932

Joseph D. Calhoun, of Media, Pa., former ABA Secretary and present member of the PBA House joined the more than 200 Pennsylvania lawyers at the 90th Annual ABA meeting in Honolulu.

1936

G. William Shea, of Los Angeles, was recently elected to the Board of Governors of the State Bar of California, our first alumnus to hold the position.

1937

Ivan Michaelsen Czap, of Philadelphia, Pa., after 30 years of civil practice became a public prosecutor in August after being sworn in to his new position of Assistant District Attorney. Mr. Czap is a noted expert on Byzantine Art and has devoted much of his legal career to churches in the U.S., France and Germany in civil matters including the recovery of property in post-war Europe.

1939

John P. Bracken, of Philadelphia, Pa., was re-elected to a seat in the ABA House of Delegates for a three year term as an Assembly Delegate.

1940

Andrew Hourigan, Jr., of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., is the chairman of the ABA committee on unauthorized practice of law which is currently debating the ethicality of group legal services.

John H. Wood, Jr., of Langhorne, Pa., recently became President of the Bucks County Bar.

Judge Mark Addison, of Lakewood, N.J., was sworn in as one of the four Judges of the Ocean County Court on September 22.

1941

Judge Lindley R. McClelland, of Erie, Pa., was appointed to the Court of Common Pleas of Erie County by Governor Shafer on February 14, 1967. He occupies the Court Room and former office of Dean Burton R. Laub, ’28.

1947

Arlin M. Adams, of Philadelphia, received the Man of the Year Award from the B’nai Jeshurun Ahavas Chesed Synagogue. He was cited for his leadership of the Philadelphia Bar Association and his many contributions to the public welfare and to the community.

1950

Daniel H. Erickson, of Glen Ridge, N.J., is more than a corporate lawyer for Worthington Corporation. His spare time is filled by running a dozen-acre Christ-

WILLIAM L. GLOSSER, of Johnstown, Pa., has been appointed to a four year term as U. S. Commissioner for the Johnstown, Pa. area. He also serves on the Board of Directors of Glosser Brothers, Inc. and the Gee Bee subsidiaries and the Johnstown Symphony Orchestra.

EDWARD A. WOOLLEY, of New York City, is now associated with Malcolm A. Hoffmann in the practice of law in New York City.

CAROLYN TEMIN, of East Falls, Pa., an attorney for the Defender Association of Philadelphia, joined a group of some 50 male counterparts by spending at least six hours a night this summer at the Germantown and Haines police station. Her purpose was to assure proper application of the law in order to prevent an incident that might trigger racial violence. The program, run by the Philadelphia Bar Association, kept police stations in eight potential trouble spots throughout the city staffed with an attorney through the evening and early morning hours and successfully averted several explosive situations.

1961
ARTHUR J. ENGLAND, JR., of Miami, Fla., has become a member of the firm of Culverhouse, Tomlinson, Taylor and Decarion of Jacksonville and Miami, Florida.

1962
PHILIP S. NYMAN, of Lowell, Mass., has been appointed Assistant District Attorney for Middlesex County, Mass. and conducts a private practice with the firm of Finneghan, Nyman and Cullry in Lowell, Mass.

ARNOLD ZENKER, of Boston, Mass., filled in for Walter Cronkite for two weeks this spring. When Mr. Cronkite returned, he opened his program with: "Good evening. This is Walter Cronkite sitting in for Arnold Zenker. It's good to be back." Mr. Zenker is leaving CBS to work at WBZ-TV in Boston as anchorman for an expanded local newscast.

JEROME R. VERLIN, of Philadelphia, Pa., has become associated with the firm of Banks, Banks and Riesenbach in Philadelphia.

1954
ROBERT G. FULLER, of Augusta, Maine, is shown here being sworn in as Assistant Attorney General of the State of Maine by George C. West, Deputy Attorney General. He left private practice in July to take the job which is to enforce Maine's anti-pollution laws. He notes an awareness by the Bench of the problems of environmental control and hopes the dearth of Penn Law graduates as adversaries indicates a partiality toward such legislation.

1965
RONALD J. BROCKINGTON, of Philadelphia, was elected to the Board of Directors of the Central Club for Boys and Girls, of which one purpose is to provide recreational opportunities for disadvantaged youths in the Philadelphia area.

1966
DONALD S. COBURN, of Orange, N.J., is now associated with the firm of Harrison and Jacobs in Newark.

FRANCIS X. GINDHART, of Philadelphia, is now a Captain in the U.S. Army Judge Advocate General's Corps serving in Qui Nhon, Vietnam, HEADQUARTERS, USA SUP COM (J.A.).

STEPHEN N. LIPTON, of Pittsburgh, has become associated with the firm of Wilner, Wilner and Kuhn in Pittsburgh.

BRUCE WAYNE, of Gotham City, is now associated with the firm of Namtab & Nibor where he will continue his crusade against crime.
The Law School had the distinction this summer of hosting the July session of the National College of State Trial Judges. Although this was the fourth summer in which the NCSTJ, an arm of the Judicial Administration section of the American Bar Association, had sponsored sessions for trial judges from throughout the country, this was the first time a session was ever conducted east of the Rocky Mountain states.

One hundred and thirty-five judges, representing 40 states and Puerto Rico, were in attendance for the month. Their daily program included four hours of formal class instruction, two hours of seminar type discussions, as well as frequent luncheon speakers. The formal course matter included Domestic Relations, Special Problems of the Judicial Function, Community Relations, Jury, Evidence, Criminal Law, Sentencing and Probation, Court Administration, Proceedings Before Trial, and Judicial Discretion.

The luncheon speakers were on both legal and non-legal subjects. In addition to members of the faculty of the University, the judges heard from the Attorney General of Pennsylvania, William C. Sennett, the District Attorney of Philadelphia, Arlen Specter, and the Executive Director of the General State Authority of Pennsylvania, Robert L. Kunzig, L'42. Arlin M. Adams, L'47, Chancellor of the Philadelphia Bar Association extended the greetings and good wishes of the local members of the Bar.

Faculty members for the program were distinguished jurists, including several members of state appellate courts. In fact, two men were elevated to higher courts during July. The faculty was augmented by judges who served as Faculty Advisors and led the evening seminars; many of the Faculty Advisors were themselves graduates of past NCSTJ programs.

The academic program was under the direction of the Dean of the National College of State Trial Judges, Judge Laurance M. Hyde, Jr. Judge Hyde spent the entire month of July in Philadelphia and then returned to the National College's main office at the University of Nevada to conduct a month long session there during August.

Former Justice of the Supreme Court, Tom C. Clark is Chairman of the Board of Directors of the National College and Law School Professor A. Leo Levin, L'42, is a member of the Board of Directors.

In selecting participants for the National College program, preference was given to recently appointed judges. Almost all of the participants received scholarship assistance either from their state or from the National College itself.

Wives and children accompanied many of the men, so that all together about 300 people were our guests for the month. Housing was provided at South Hall and at the Law School Dormitory, and houses and apartments were secured for those desiring that type of accommodation.

Under the guidance of Miss Irene Barrett, Placement Director of the Law School, trips and other special programs were arranged for the women and children so that there was at least one major activity almost every day. In addition to the trips there were splash parties, picnics and fashion shows.

David Lissy, a third year student at the Law School, served as Administrative Assistant to Judge Hyde, acting as liaison between the Law School and the NCSTJ, and coordinating the speakers program, housing arrangements, banquets, and all other administrative details.

Mr. Lissy and Miss Barrett handled their duties with excellence, and contributed significantly to the success of the entire program.

I. NEWTON TAYLOR DIES

I. Newton Taylor, L'32, died unexpectedly on October 24, 1967 from a heart attack. He had practiced law in Huntingdon County, Pa. since 1933 and was an active member of the bar. He was District Attorney of Huntingdon County from 1940 to 1948 and Huntingdon County Solicitor from 1936 to 1940 and 1956 to 1960 and Huntingdon County Republican Chairman from 1936 to 1940. He taught business law at Juniata College since 1949 and was a partner in the firm of Taylor & Taylor.

He is survived by his wife, Janet C. Taylor, two sons and two daughters.
Vice Dean THEODORE H. HUSTED has been named to a committee of twelve Philadelphia industrialists and educators formed to increase cooperation between Philadelphia public and parochial schools. One of its primary objectives will be to determine the degree of cooperation which can exist under state and federal constitutions. A typical problem in this area is the current practice of some public school art and music teachers teaching one day a week in parochial schools. The constitutionality of the practice has already been challenged.

The continuing growth of the Law School is evidenced by the addition of three attorneys to its staff: ARNOLD J. MILLER has replaced William R. Shane as Assistant Dean for Admissions. Before receiving his LL.B. from Harvard in 1943, Mr. Miller received his B.A., magna cum laude, from Yeshiva College, a diploma with distinction from the Teachers Institute of Yeshiva University, and an A.M. from Brown University in Philosophy.

A member of the Massachusetts Bar, he served in the Army Combat Engineers from 1943 to 1946 and then practiced law in his own firm in Worcester, Mass., specializing in real estate matters. A consultant to the Harvard-Brandeis Research Project for the Development of the Law of Israel and Auditor for the Massachusetts Superior Court to hear motor vehicle cases, Mr. Miller has published numerous articles in Law Reviews and Bar Journals. Among his non-legal publications, Mr. Miller has a very successful book of children’s plays, several of which have been produced in various cities. He has also written an anthology of folk tales which is awaiting publication.

Mr. Miller actively participated in numerous civic activities in Worcester and received the Fourth Annual Revel Award of the Yeshiva College Alumni Association for Community Leadership. Over the past 20 years Mr. Miller has devoted much of his spare time to educational projects, serving as educational chairman of various committees, and has also taught a wide variety of courses.

Mr. Miller is married to the former Blanche Hait and they have two sons, ages 17 and 14.

ROBERT F. MAGUIRE, a 1951 cum laude graduate of the Law School, began his duties this October in the newly created position of Assistant Dean for Graduate Studies and Research. He was Managing Editor of the Law Review and is a member of the Order of the Coif. He attended Law School while in active duty in the Regular Army.

Mr. Maguire spent his youth in New York City and has resided in Philadelphia since 1941. He received his A.B. from Fordham in 1939. He served on active duty in the Army from 1941 until October 1967 when he retired in the grade of Colonel. He was a member of The Judge Advocate General's School and taught for five years at the Judge Advocate General's School in Charlottesville, Virginia. For five years preceding his retirement, Mr. Maguire was a member of the Army Trial Judiciary and functioned as a circuit-riding trial judge for general courts-martial.

He is 48 years old and a member of the Pennsylvania Bar. He is married to the former Margaret Martin. They have five children. Louis, 26, and Robert, 24, are graduates of St. Joseph's College and are studying for doctoral degrees. Louis is in the field of Educational Administration at Temple University, and Robert is in Metallurgical Engineering at Pennsylvania. Sister Brian Mary, S.H.C.J., formerly Margaret May, 21, is winding up her undergraduate studies at Rosemont. Mary Constance, 18, is a freshman at the University of Maryland. William, 16, is at St. Joseph's Prep.

ALEXANDER A. ZVEGINTZOV has replaced James D. Evans, Jr., who is now working in the Bequest Program, as Assistant to the Dean for Alumni Affairs and Development. He received his B.A. from the University of Colorado in 1961 and his LL.B. from the University of North Carolina in 1964.

A native of Philadelphia, Mr. Zvegintzov returned here to take the Bar and practice law. His legal experience includes clerkships at Drinkers, Biddle & Reath and Pepper, Hamilton & Scheetz and two years as associate in the firm of Clark, Spahr, Eichman & Yardley where he was engaged in general practice.

He is married to the former Christa Becker of Eswege, Germany and they have a two-and-one-half year old son, Nicholas A., who is dedicated to the destruction of personal property.

THE CLASS OF 1970

Skier, Mountain-climber, sky-diver, travel agent, bartender, case worker with problem children, maître d’, wine steward, public relations man in charge of a development program to exploit the historic value of a Revolutionary War Battlesite in Vermont—these are some of the activities and interests not of a group of individuals, but of one member alone of the Class of 1970 of the University of Pennsylvania Law School. Obviously he is an unusual man, but he is by no means unique in a class which presents a composite picture of great talent and ability.

The highly selective process of admission has resulted, on the whole, in an entering class which possesses high motivation and seriousness of purpose, as well as keen intelligence and a sense of social awareness. A number of members of the class have done graduate work and there are, inter alia, two students who already have their Ph.D.'s.

The class totals 193 students, who have come here from 64 different colleges and universities. Twenty-one states, the District of Columbia, and England are represented in the class. Yale and Pennsylvania are the most heavily represented schools, having each supplied 29 students.

The objective qualifications of this class, namely, the LSAT (Law School Admission Test) scores and the College Record Weight scores continue in the upward trend which has been unbroken over the past several years, albeit the climb shows some evidence of levelling off at this point. The average LSAT score achieved by the Class of 1970 was 637.8, which would place the student at about the 92nd percentile of those who have taken the test since 1958; and the Median College Record Weight score achieved would place the student at least in the upper one-quarter of his college class.

In line with its policy of endeavoring to provide democratic access to the study of law, the Law School has provided scholarships and loans to 77 members of the class, representing 40% of the enrollment. In sum, this amounted to $95,290 provided for scholarships, and $57,550 in loans offered by or through the school. It is the hope and belief of the administration that no student who was otherwise qualified was prevented from matriculating at the Law School for lack of funds.

Both faculty and administration look forward to a fruitful and spiritually satisfying year in enabling a group of unusual promise and ability to embark on what it is hoped will be successful and rewarding legal careers.

ALUMNI MEET IN HONOLULU

The University of Pennsylvania Law Alumni Society held its customary luncheon in conjunction with the annual meeting of the American Bar Association in Honolulu, Hawaii on August 9 at the Hilton Hawaiian Village.

In the absence of Society President, Carroll R. Wetzel, '30, who was unable to attend the luncheon because of his duties with the Corporate Law Section of the ABA, Edward W. Madeira, Jr., '52, filled in for him and presided over the luncheon.

J. Russell Cades, '28, gave a most entertaining keynote address recalling some of his experiences gained through 38 years of practice on the Island (see p. 1 for the text of his address) and Dean Jefferson B. Fordham gave a report on the Law School.

Considering the distance involved, the turnout was impressive. Of the 41 alumni who attended the luncheon, 21 brought spouses and two of those brought children along for a total of 65 luncheon guests.

A tremendous vote of thanks must be given to Russell Cades' young associated, John A. Chanin, '64, the man on the spot who made it a smooth running, pleasant occasion and who was largely responsible for the overall success of the luncheon.

PROFESSOR OLIVER TAKES DIPLOMATIC POST

Professor Covey T. Oliver is taking leave of absence from the Law School to serve as Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs and United States Coordinator for the Alliance of Progress. That it is usually regarded as an impossible post evidences the scope of his latest venture into diplomacy.

Professor Oliver returned to the Law School for one year where he again earned the admiration and respect of the faculty and student body after serving as United States Ambassador to Colombia for two years. Colombia’s retired President Valencia characterized him as “permanently outstanding among his peers.”

Despite the fact that Professor Oliver’s newest post has been held by five others in the past six years, it is widely felt, judging by his past experience and outstanding record, that he can succeed where others have failed in developing a mutually beneficial, long range relationship with our volatile, neighbor-nations to the south.

Professor Oliver feels that success will depend in part on “institution building.” It is his thinking that it is not sufficient merely to improve productivity and develop greater monetary stability. This must be implemented by creating institutions that will provide the farmer with an opportunity to own land, a meaningful education for the young and a just reward for the laborer. Thus, there must be changes in distribution and in the processes for meeting the expectations of various groups in the social structure.

It is a further ambition of Professor Oliver’s, through the channeling of U. S. resources, to see that a common market is established among the southern Latin American countries by 1985, a goal established by the Punta Del Este hemispheric summit conference last April.

FILII ALUMNORUM

The following alumni have the pleasure of seeing their sons enrolled in the Class of 1970:

Edmund L. Harvey, ’41
Robert M. Jones, ’48
Edward J. Kaier, ’33
Walter P. McEvilly, ’39
Edward M. Watters, Jr., ’35

The Department of Law, as it was then called, was housed in Congress Hall, Sixth and Chestnut Streets from 1895 to 1900. This was its sixth home and from there it moved to 3400 Chestnut Street. The original caption states the picture was taken the last day it was quartered there and describes the building to the right as the New Court House and to the left, State House Row, Independence Hall, City Hall and the Drexel Building.
the 1966-67 graduating class, 26 received judicial clerkships. The remaining members of the class pursued their legal careers in federal and state government, corporations, graduate schools and education. It is interesting to note that within the five year life of the Placement Office, only two students are known to have started their own firms.

In the field of undergraduate placement, therefore, the Placement Office invites recruiters to come to the Law School to conduct interviews and it acts as an information dissemination agency to make known to the law students what sort of an office is interviewing and miscellaneous details concerning the interviews. Understandably, then, it was not long after she started that Irene M. Barrett, Placement Director became known as the Dolly Levi of the Law School.

In addition to scheduling interviews, the Placement Office also counsels students, many of whom are going through job interviews for the first time, on how to present themselves, their record and their achievements. But in the final analysis, the job of getting a job after Law School remains precisely the same as in earlier days in one most significant aspect—the student must sell himself and no one else can do it for him. While the Placement Office stands ready to offer what help it can, the Office is not doing the hiring nor is it the one being hired. One mistake which is frequently made by people seeking the help of the Placement Office is that the Placement Office is a substitute for their own initiative with regard to seeking and obtaining employment. In fact, the Placement Office is but a supplement to the individual’s own efforts and, at best, can only act as a catalyst between the person seeking employment and those who are hiring. Therefore, while today’s law student might not wear out as much shoe leather looking for a job as his predecessors did, he still must be able to convince a potential employer that he is the man to fill the position for which he is being interviewed.

Occasionally the task of the Placement Office is complicated when a student persists in seeking positions for which his capabilities and past record do not qualify him. The failure to attain the unattainable is frequently blamed upon the Placement Office. More properly, the cause can be attributed to the applicant’s unwillingness or inability to be realistic and objective about himself and his future. Consequently, in addition to preparing students for interviews, the Placement Office also endeavors to guide and counsel students as to where they should concentrate their interviewing efforts.

In virtually any interview the moment of truth arises when the student is questioned as to his law school record. In this regard, the Law School has recently adopted a method of grading which is intended to indicate in a more equitable manner the student’s Law School performance. The old numerical grading system by which a student was ranked in his class presented an exaggerated picture of the difference in quality between one student and another where the actual difference may only have been one-tenth of a point. The Law School no longer gives numerical grades nor does it provide class rankings. Instead, students may receive the following grades in descending order of merit: Distinguished, Excellent, Good, Qualified, Unsatisfactory. Concurrently, the Law School does recognize the value of knowing approximately though not specifically where one student’s performance stands with relation to that of his classmates. For this purpose, a table is prepared by which interviewers can determine the approximate performance level of each student.

Finally, while the Placement Office is primarily concerned in assisting currently enrolled students, this is by no means its sole function. Being a continuing service operation, it also functions as a clearing house for employment opportunities for practicing alumni seeking a change in position. The Placement Office is frequently contacted by law firms and corporations having openings for lawyers with varying degrees of legal experience and by Law School alumni seeking new employment. The Placement Office is available to give whatever assistance it can in this area of post-graduate employment.
