At our recent Benefactor’s Dinner, I read a letter from a grateful alumna that speaks volumes about the community we’ve built at the Law School and the support we enjoy as a result of our distinctive culture.

This member of the Class of 1997 wrote of her unexpected conversion to public interest law and how it was driven by her experience with the Public Interest Center. She recounted her recent return to the Law School for the Sparer Symposium, and what she encountered impressed her.

“The high quality of everything the Toll Center is doing was palpable — most importantly it shows in the eyes of every single student I met that day. The enthusiasm and support the school is lending to the Center is outstanding. However, I think it is the support of alumni, like the tangible support Mr. Toll is giving to the Law School, which has the largest impact.

“So please let Mr. Toll know that other alumni are cheering him for his donation and that his vision in supporting public interest programming at Penn Law spurs us to continue to support the Law School for years to come.”

This past year, Bob Toll L’66 and Jane Toll GSE’66 continued their support of the Toll Public Interest Center with additional resources for summer fellowships and internships, pro bono service projects, scholarships and the ongoing loan forgiveness program which encourages alumni commitment to public service.

Their efforts have transformed our public service programs. But it takes many, many gifts to move the Law School forward. Last year more than 4,500 donors contributed to the Law School. In total, we raised nearly $15.4 million, including $3.2 million in annual giving. For the record, we have now raised $10 million or more seven years in a row. Astounding!

So what is the net effect of your support?

Your gifts helped us strengthen the Law School in countless and immensely meaningful areas. We put in place the infrastructure to launch a revolutionary new clinic, known as the Detkin Intellectual Property and Technology Legal Clinic, which will allow students to learn about the patent process and what it takes to bring innovations to market.

We established several new scholarships, including one that supports study abroad programs between Penn Law and Chinese law schools. We created a program that will support faculty who teach appellate advocacy as well as students who compete in national moot court competitions. And we received continued support for Golkin Hall, an exquisite building that will sustain and nurture the most collegial law school community in America. It opens in January.

Our progress and continued success rests on the shoulders of alumni. Without your support, we could not have made such palpable improvements — this past year or any other year.

So Paul Haaga and I want to join that letter writer and thank Bob Toll and every donor, big and small, for giving to the Law School. We are in your debt. Literally. Thank you.

The Institute for Law & Economics (ILE) at the University of Pennsylvania was founded in 1980 as a collaboration of the Law School, the Wharton School, and the Department of Economics in Penn’s School of Arts and Sciences. Cross-disciplinary research, the cornerstone of ILE, seeks to influence the national policy debate by analyzing the impact of law on the global economy, spotlighting the significant role that economics plays in fashioning legal policy.

In the current environment, with the interface between law and business assuming critical importance, ILE’s work has been at the forefront, both in scholarship and in pragmatic discussions of the central issues involved in corporate governance. Through its roundtables and other conferences, ILE assembles a unique mix of academics, business and government leaders, and prominent members of the legal profession and the judiciary, who analyze and help shape business policy and the laws and regulations that support it.

ILE has an extraordinarily distinguished cadre of board members and sponsors who are willing to give of their time and expertise to make its programming a success. The range of organizations represented on the ILE advisory board was further broadened during the past year with the addition of five new members: George A. Casey (Shearman & Sterling LLP); Scott C. Goebel (Fidelity Management & Research Company); Kenneth A. Lefkowitz (Hughes Hubbard & Reed LLP); John J. Suydam (Apollo Global Management, LLC); and Christopher Young (Credit Suisse).

Funding for the Institute comes from a diverse group of corporations, law firms, foundations, and individuals. Once again this year, fundraising was greatly augmented by leadership gifts at the benefactor level: Charles I. Cogut L’73 and Simpson Thacher & Bartlett LLP; Robert L. Friedman L’67, senior managing director, The Blackstone Group L.P.; Paul G. Haaga, Jr. L’74, WG’74, chairman of the board, Capital Research and Management Company; Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, via Executive Partner Eric J. Friedman L’89; and Sullivan & Cromwell LLP, via Joseph B. Frumkin L’85.

In Academic Year 2010-2011, the Institute for Law and Economics raised $538,385 for its programs.

The Gittis Center for Clinical Legal Studies is home to the Law School’s nationally acclaimed clinical programs that afford students the opportunity to build successful relationships with clients, work closely with professionals from other fields, engage in legal advocacy, and learn about law and lawyering under the close supervision of highly talented and experienced faculty.

Below are examples of the incredible work our students have done this past year:

- Four students from the Civil Practice Clinic spent their spring break in the United States Courthouse in Philadelphia closing out a federal civil rights jury trial. The Clinic was representing a capital inmate in his lawsuit against prison officials and prison health services. The jury found that the provider of prison medical care was in violation of the First and Eighth Amendments.
- Students in the Supreme Court Clinic briefed, and Professor Stephanos Bibas argued, a merit case before the Supreme Court of the United States. In Turner v. Rogers, the Court agreed unanimously with the Clinic that pro se custodial mothers seeking child support should not automatically be put at a disadvantage by having counsel appointed only for non-supporting fathers.
- The Entrepreneurship Legal Clinic is helping the Enterprise Center Community Development Corporation in West Philadelphia turn a boarded up grocery store into the Center for Culinary Enterprises, a food-business incubator providing education and jobs. Last semester, the City of Philadelphia refused a zoning variance application for the project. One of the students persuaded the Zoning Board of Adjustment to overturn the refusal, clearing the way for construction to begin. More than 100 jobs will be created once the project is completed.
- Student mediators in the Mediation Clinic reached an agreement between two parents involved in a difficult custody dispute. They also participated in groundbreaking mediation work, resolving international child custody disputes via video teleconferencing.
- Six Transnational Legal Clinic students and their faculty supervisor traveled to Haiti to help grassroots organizations understand the international human rights framework at issue in Haiti’s upcoming review before the UN Human Rights Council. They met with victims of gender-based violence in the workplace, the CEO of the largest private employer in Haiti, and representatives from international organizations, and contributed to the drafting of a report submitted to the UN.
- Students in the Legislative Clinic interned in Washington, D.C. One student wrote a public letter to President Obama on behalf of New York City’s congressional delegation, protesting cuts in Community Service Block Grants. Another student edited a floor speech for his Congressman. On the last day of class, students were treated to a discussion in Vice President Biden’s conference room, where they received career advice from four legislative staff veterans: Nicole Isaac L’04, deputy director of Legislative Affairs for Vice President Biden; Drew Littman L’85, chief of staff to Senator Al Franken; Alyson Cooke L’89, majority counsel on the Senate’s environment and public works committee; and Martin Paone, executive vice president of Prime Policy Group.

The Law School is grateful to the following donors who generously gave $235,808 in gifts and pledges in support of the The Gittis Center for Clinical Legal Studies in the academic year 2010-2011.
The Circle honors alumni and friends who have provided for the future of the Law School through life income gifts, charitable remainder trusts, charitable bequests and other life instruments.
The Law School is grateful to the following donors who generously gave to the Lerner Fund, established in memory of Alan Lerner W‘62, L‘65, a practice professor at Penn Law, civil rights lawyer, and devoted advocate for children’s welfare. Lerner was the founder and director of the Law School’s Interdisciplinary Child Advocacy Clinic, which brings together law, medical, and social work students to study the legal system’s response to child neglect and abuse. He also served as the faculty director of Penn’s Field Center for Children’s Policy, Practice and Research. To continue his work, the Lerner Fund provides summer stipends to Penn Law students working in child advocacy.

The Law School is grateful to the following donors who generously gave $24,335 in support of the University of Pennsylvania’s Biddle Law Library in Academic Year 2010-2011.

THANK YOU TO OUR VOLUNTEERS

The Honorable Harold Berger EE’48, L’51 is the chair of the Friends of Biddle Law Library. Judge Berger is a senior partner and managing principal of Berger and Montague P.C. He formerly served as judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia and is the immediate past president of the Federal Bar Association’s Eastern District Chapter. He is the author of numerous law review articles, has lectured extensively before bar associations and at universities, and has served as chair of the International Conferences on Global Interdependence held at Princeton University. Judge Berger has served as chair of the Aerospace Law Committees of the American, Federal and Inter-American Bar Associations and, in recognition of the importance and impact of his scholarly work, was elected to the International Academy of Astronautics in Paris.

As his biographies in Who’s Who in America and Who’s Who in American Law outline, he is the recipient of numerous awards, including the Special Service Award of the Pennsylvania Conference of State Trial Judges and a Special American Bar Association Presidential Program Award. Judge Berger is a permanent member of the Judicial Conference of the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit and is the recipient of the Federal Bar Association’s National Service Award for distinguished service to the Federal and State Judiciary. He has participated in many national litigation matters of complex nature including In Re: Three Mile Island litigation where he served as liaison counsel and the Exxon Valdez oil Spill litigation where he served on the case management team and as co-chair of the National Discovery Committee.

Judge Berger has previously made major commitments to the Law Annual Giving Fund and the Biddle Law Library. He is a member of the Board of Overseers of the University of Pennsylvania’s School of Engineering & Applied Sciences and has made major gifts to create the Harold and Renee Berger Auditorium and Lobby in Penn’s new Bio-Engineering building.

“So, do you still have any books in there?” is usually the question a law library director hears when meeting an alum. It’s a good question, although it suggests an underlying premise that libraries are only about books. Today’s law libraries are a combination of service and resources, and the resources are both in print and digital formats.

The Biddle Law librarians have been actively creating a library for the future, embracing changes in technology, replacing print with electronic resources when possible, and still acquiring an impressive collection of print materials not otherwise available. The change from print to electronic formats for many materials such as case reporters and the standard law journal has enabled us to also acquire materials not previously available. Our electronic collections of government documents have expanded greatly in the past two to three years, enabling students to search the full text of a wide range of congressional hearings and reports.

We have recently been able to expand our collection of foreign law databases, including key databases for India and for Latin America.

At the same time, we continue to build our collection of print resources that are not available electronically. These materials are primarily books by scholars on a wide range of topics, but also primary resources from many countries. While the library’s print collection is growing more slowly than in the past, our overall collection of resources has become incredibly enriched by a combination of databases and traditional books.

Yes, the library still has books, as well as many other resources which increasingly enrich our overall collections. We are grateful that the generosity of our friends and alumni has enabled us to continue to support the diverse educational and research programs at Penn Law with both traditional resources and new technologies.
