From the Editors

With this issue, the Journal completes its first volume. Recent additions to our editorial staff will make it possible for us to accelerate our publication schedule and thus to reach our readers more frequently than in our initial year.

Following our plan to bring you a number of articles in several broad areas, we have explored in our early issues such matters as disclosure policy, insider trading, co-determination, banking regulation and national variants in securities regulation. As we look toward our second volume, we propose to enrich our coverage of these areas with particular reference to banking and worker participation in management and to extend our concerns to matters of corporation law and accounting and to the rules governing investment by foreigners in domestic enterprises.

Our readers can help us by letting us know what subjects they would like the Journal to address. Indeed we invite the submission of articles for consideration for possible publication. We welcome the opportunity to review articles within the broad scope described inside the front cover of the Journal. As indicated in the Instructions to Authors inside the back cover, although our language of publication is generally English, we will consider German and French articles for publication.

We look forward to the Journal's second volume with enthusiasm.
