Welcome to the University of Pennsylvania Carey Law School!

This tour guides you through the Law School’s major architectural highlights and history. As you walk around the complex, you will visit the Law School’s four interconnected buildings set around a central Courtyard.

Uniquely among law schools, our faculty and staff offices, classrooms and seminar rooms, and student spaces are interspersed throughout the physical plant, rather than siloed in separate areas. The integrated design reinforces the collaborative spirit of the Law School community.

The Law School’s state-of-the-art facilities include a large auditorium, high-tech classrooms and seminar rooms, a modern moot court room, numerous common areas for student learning and interaction, and indoor and outdoor spaces for quiet reflection.

If you have any questions or need assistance while on this tour, students and staff will be glad to help you, or you can return to the Office of Admissions, the Graduate Programs Office, or the Master in Law Program office.
Tanenbaum Hall is one of the most active areas at the Law School. The ground floor houses many administrative offices: Admissions and Financial Aid, Graduate Programs, Inclusion and Engagement, Legal Education Programs, Master in Law Program, Career Planning & Professionalism, the Toll Public Interest Center, Service Corps, and Communications. Several Law School journal offices, the Clock Lounge, classrooms, and a seminar room are also located on the ground floor. Biddle Law Library, a modern, world-class library that offers rich collections, comfortable study spaces, and seminar rooms shares floors two through five with the Center on Professionalism, Curricular Affairs, ITS, International Programs, and Legal Practice Skills.

Admissions and Financial Aid | T-151

Admissions
The Office of Admissions oversees JD admissions. Applicants have completed their undergraduate degrees and, often hold advanced degrees in a broad array of disciplines; many have work experience prior to attending law school. Students are selected from over 5,000 applicants and arrive from across the country and around the globe.

Financial Aid
The Law School’s financial aid program provides a wide range of financial aid opportunities to help our students manage the cost of attending law school.

Graduate Programs, Legal Education Programs | T-155

Graduate Programs
Graduate Programs oversees admissions and support for the approximately 115 LLM students, foreign trained attorneys who come to the United States each year to complete graduate degrees at the Law School. The Graduate Programs team acts as the primary point-of-contact for all LLM, LLCM, and SJD (doctoral) students.

Legal Education Programs
Legal Education Programs implements targeted programs taught by world-renowned faculty and legal experts for students and professionals outside of the Law School. Their offerings include a pre-college academy geared toward high school students, summer immersion programs, and online learning initiatives. As Pennsylvania’s first licensed Continuing Legal Education (CLE) provider, the Law School offers CLE credit at various seminars, conferences, and special events throughout the academic year.

Master in Law Program | T-150
The Master in Law Program office administers and supports programs at the Law School for professionals and students who desire legal education and training to inform and enrich their current or future professions outside of law, including medicine, technology, business, public policy, and education. This office oversees the Certificate in Law and Master in Law degree, and engages with hundreds of students who join the Law School’s community for one or more classes each year.
Toll Public Interest Center | T-148 and T-122

The Toll Public Interest Center (TPIC) is home to Penn’s renowned Pro Bono Program, as well as a wide array of activities for students interested in public service. Through TPIC, students engage in pro bono opportunities locally, nationally, and internationally. TPIC also supports more than 30 initiatives developed by students to address areas of unmet need. TPIC implements a broad vision of public interest commitment for the Law School students, hosting speakers and a full week of public interest activities each year, supporting the Toll Public Interest Scholars, and mentoring students who aspire to pursue public interest and government careers. Here you will also find the office that facilitates the Service Corps program, which is comprised of Toll Public Interest Scholars, Toll Public Interest Fellows, and Corps Members. The Service Corps reinforces the Law School’s commitment to service by increasing substantive programming and financial support for students pursuing public interest careers.

DIRECTIONS
Once you pass the clock, but before exiting the lounge, turn right down the hallway to find the Toll Public Interest Center, Law Review, and other journal offices.

Biddle Law Library | 2nd – 5th Floors

Biddle Law Library is one of the preeminent law libraries in the world and is the research laboratory of the Law School. Its efficient operation, invaluable resources, and friendly, knowledgeable staff facilitate scholarship and study.

The Library’s rich collection ranges from important historical works to the most current digital materials supporting research in American, foreign and comparative law. Through Biddle’s online catalog, LOLA, students may search national bibliographic databases, the library catalogs of other major academic law libraries, and periodical indexes. The richness of the collection is complemented by the service of the dedicated law librarians who provide both students and faculty a wide range of services. Several librarians teach courses in legal research, and all students receive training in Westlaw and Lexis. Biddle offers students small meeting and seminar rooms, quiet study spaces, and an inviting atmosphere for legal study.

Legal Practice Skills | 2nd Floor South

Legal Practice Skills marks the beginning of a law student’s professional apprenticeship. In this yearlong required course, first-year students learn the skills that lawyers need to practice law: the research skills to find the law applicable to a problem, the analytic skills to solve the problem, and the writing and oral advocacy skills to present those solutions to a client, another attorney, or to a judge.

International Programs | T-334-336

The International Programs Office manages the Law School’s comprehensive offerings in international, comparative, and foreign law. Students visit this office when seeking advising on specific programs, such as the the Law School’s International Internship Program, Global Research Seminar, International Summer Human Rights Fellowships, Study Abroad, overseas conferences, international research opportunities, the Global Legal Practice Fellowship, and international Joint Degrees and Certificates. The Law School annually invites internationally recognized experts in international and comparative law from around the world to Philadelphia.

Information Technology Services | 3rd Floor West

The Information Technology Services (ITS) department provides a broad range of computing, media, and network resources and services to the entire Law School community.

INTERNATIONALLY ENGAGED

100+ students worked, volunteered, studied, or conducted research abroad last year

Career Planning & Professionalism | T-113

The Office of Career Planning & Professionalism (CP&P) empowers students to become lifelong owners and architects of their careers. Our programs, services, online resources, and one-on-one counseling provide students with a competitive advantage throughout their careers. The dedicated team serves all students and alumni, helping them identify their individual goals, teaching them the career planning skills necessary to reach those goals, and giving them access to as many opportunities as possible. Our students and graduates are highly sought after by employers across the country, many of whom come to our on-campus recruiting events.

Communications Office | T-110

In addition to telling the Law School’s story through our website, news media outreach, and social media, the Communications Office provides graphic and design support for publicity materials for student organizations presenting symposia or lectures.

The Courtyard

The Courtyard is a focal point and gathering place for the Law School community. The patio and lawn are a refreshing oasis where students gather to socialize, enjoy the sunshine and fresh air, and even find a quiet spot to study. The Courtyard is also the location for community barbeques and for student groups hosting social events.

Dedicated in 2012, Golkin Hall serves as the Law School’s main entrance and completes its vision for the finest urban law school campus in America. It complements historic Silverman Hall on one side and the more modern Tanenbaum on the other. The building features roof-top gardens and green roofs, a state-of-the-art court room, and a 350-seat auditorium, providing the Law School with another signature space that encourages easy interaction and collaboration among students, faculty, and staff. The building’s green design is LEED Gold Certified, one of the first law schools so designated in the United States.

DIRECTIONS
Continue down the hallway with the Courtyard on your left to reach Golkin Hall.

FIRST-LEVEL GOLKIN

Dean’s Suite | GK101

The Dean’s Suite is the center of the executive operations at the Law School. The Dean envisions the traditional and innovative goals for the Law School, and dedicated administrators ensure that the Law School community is well served by the various administrative offices. The Law School’s cross-disciplinary, globally-focused program prepares graduates to become leaders in the profession and society, and continues to place the Law School at the forefront of legal education. Leadership and vision from within the Dean’s Suite assures the Law School’s multifaceted approach takes maximum advantage of the University’s superb graduate and professional schools — which are all located nearby — affording students a myriad of opportunities to enrich their legal training with study in fields as diverse as business, education, health, public policy, or technology, and to develop real-word expertise and build networks in the areas of law where they seek to practice.

Business Affairs and Facilities | Inside the Dean’s Suite

Business Affairs administers accounts payable activity, student event finances, payroll, travel, financial services, and accounting. The Facilities department manages all aspects of building administration.

GROUND-LEVEL GOLKIN

The Davis Student Union and Sidebar Café
This open lobby space features comfortable banquettes and open seating — a popular space for students. The adjacent Sidebar Café is a great place to pick up your coffee, lunch, or a snack.

Michael A. Fitts Auditorium
Named in honor of former Dean Michael A. Fitts, this flexible 350-seat auditorium, with the latest technology and superb acoustics, serves as one of the Law School’s venues for larger audiences as well as a modern classroom. A robust series of events throughout the year includes the Law School’s annual moot court competition known as the Keedy Cup and talks on everything from corporate law, to human rights, to the future of the Internet. Presenters might include a Supreme Court Justice, a leading economist, or an expert panel.

Kline & Specter Courtroom
Built with the latest technology, this courtroom gives future litigators a place to refine their oral advocacy skills. On your right, against the red wall, is a skylight, which adds natural lighting during the day. The spectator section has tables that can easily be reconfigured to allow maximum flexibility.

UPPER-LEVELS GOLKIN

Classrooms and Faculty Offices | 2nd Floor
On the second floor, there is a seminar room directly opposite the staircase landing. To the right and left are faculty offices.

Development and Alumni Relations Office | 3rd Floor
To the right of the landing on the third floor of Golkin Hall are our Development and Alumni Relations Offices. Law School graduates have a long history of loyalty to the institution — no doubt based on their positive experience while here. Alumni participation in annual giving is always in the top two or three in the country, and our alumni network is very supportive of one another.
Rooftop Deck | 3rd Floor

Golkin Hall puts an emphasis on three areas of environmental sustainability: the management of natural resources such as natural light and storm water, the reduction of greenhouse gases, and an increase in use of renewable energy. Golkin Hall’s green roofs not only increase areas for collaboration in rooftop gardens, but also serve to reduce rain water entering the city’s storm water system and the heat-island effect caused by conventional dark roofs.

Offices of Academic Affairs and Student Affairs | GK-103

Academic Affairs

The Academic Affairs office is the nerve center of the Law School’s daily operations — handling curriculum development, course registration, exams, transcripts, and room assignments. Students can select from a diverse range of courses and clinics that allow for the exploration of law in its increasingly broad application. The Academic Affairs office also works with students who are interested in joint degrees and certificates at our sister schools at Penn.

Student Affairs

This office is responsible for supporting students’ personal and professional growth while at Penn. When students ask themselves the inevitable question, “Why am I in law school?,” Student Affairs is more than willing to lend a helpful and understanding ear. The Student Affairs staff counsels students with academic concerns and helps students face unexpected emergencies. The Student Affairs team is also the liaison to student organizations at the Law School.

Haaga Lounge (“The Goat“)

The Haaga Lounge mirrors the Clock Lounge as a main student gathering spot. As you enter, you will see “The Goat” on your far left, past the skylight, giving the Lounge its name. “The Goat” is actually a Hsieh-Chai, a figure from Chinese lore dating back to the days of Shun (circa 2200 B.C.). Hsieh-Chai was goat-like, but bore only one horn, and was endowed with the faculty of detecting the guilty. According to legend, when the famous minister Kao Yao tried cases in which guilt was uncertain, he would use Hsieh-Chai to distinguish between the crooked and the upright. Donated by a former faculty member, the sculpture adorns the Law School as a reminder of how far the judicial process has developed.

From the Offices of Academic Affairs and Student Affairs on your right, turn left to enter the Goat Lounge.

Turn right, pass the Goat statue on your left and continue straight into the Great Hall.
Penn’s Law School was first housed near Independence Hall in Center City Philadelphia, close to the city’s courts and law offices. In 1900, the Law School made the bold move to relocate, joining the rest of the University at the new West Philadelphia campus. The University community and distinguished jurists from across the country gathered to dedicate a new building celebrated as “the most completely beautiful and most beautifully complete building ever designed for the sole purpose of housing a law school.” The exterior of the building, designed in the English classic style of the time by the famous Philadelphia firm of Cope and Stewardson, incorporates shields and medallions bearing the names of significant figures in the history of Anglo-American common law.

Silverman Hall

FIRST-LEVEL SILVERMAN

Great Hall and the Grand Staircase

The building once was named Lewis Hall in honor of William Draper Lewis, the Law School’s Dean from 1896 to 1914. Restored and revitalized in conjunction with the Law School’s sesquicentennial, the building is now named for honored Law School alumnus Henry R. Silverman L’64. The Great Hall serves as an elegant location for numerous receptions that follow symposia and major lectures.

Faculty Lounge and Faculty Offices

Just off the Great Hall, you will find the Faculty Lounge on your right, which serves as the hub of faculty collaboration and intellectual exchange. Faculty offices extend off both sides of the Great Hall, in Gittis Hall, and in Golkin Hall. Most professors are easily accessible after class, by email, or in their offices. Most offer official office hours and welcome students to stop by. Students meet with faculty members to discuss class material, interesting legal issues of the day, job searches, or clerkships.

GROUND-LEVEL SILVERMAN

Gittis Center for Clinical Legal Studies

The Gittis Center for Clinical Legal Studies is a multi-faceted clinical law practice and state-of-the-art teaching law office located in the heart of the Law School complex. Opened in 1996, the Center contains faculty offices, a student lawyering center, video-equipped conference rooms, seminar rooms, and a separate client entrance directly to the street. Most of Penn’s renowned clinics are housed within the Law School, while students also participate in the Criminal Defense Clinic downtown and the Legislative Clinic in Washington, D.C. and many other off-site externships.

The Center vests students with primary responsibility for resolving clients’ real-life problems in a supportive learning environment characterized by dynamic teaching of essential skills and individualized mentoring and supervision by experienced faculty-practitioners. Over the past two decades, Penn’s history of anticipating professional changes and tailoring its clinical training to major roles lawyers play has earned it a reputation for educational innovation, outstanding program design, and rigorous preparation of its graduates for entry into law practice.

Keedy Cup

The Keedy Cup and a listing of previous winners of this prestigious Moot Court competition are displayed on the ground floor of Silverman Hall. Named for former Law School Dean Edwin R. Keedy, the Keedy Cup is awarded to the winning team in the Law School’s intramural appellate advocacy competition. The Keedy Cup argument is held every January before a panel of eminent judges from around the country.

Clinton/Parker Student Wellness Suite and the “Living Room”

These spaces house Student Affairs services while providing a relaxing and inviting space for student interaction.

Each of the following departments plays a crucial role in developing skills, providing support and fostering a thriving and inclusive community to ensure students are positioned for success in the legal world.

The Center on Professionalism

Focusing on providing students with the skills employers seek and require, the Center on Professionalism (COP) offers a wide array of useful programming throughout the year.

Starting with Professionalism Day in September and running the length of the academic year, COP helps students with:

- Confident and Purposeful Communication
- Relationship Building
- Mastery of Executive Technology Skills
- Personal Productivity and Effectiveness
- High-Level Strategic Thinking
- Team Dynamics

Contact the COP team by emailing professionalism@law.penn.edu or by calling 215-573-0222.

Academic Support Program

The rigors of legal education can be daunting for even the best students. The Academic Support Program supports students to equip themselves with methods and techniques for succeeding in their studies.

1L students are invited to attend a series of programming by the Academic Support Office in the Fall Term and as needed are given individualized academic support plans in the Spring Term. The Academic Support Office continues support past the 1L year to any student who may need it.

Contact Jessica Simon, the Director of Academic Support Program, by email at jsimon@law.upenn.edu or by phone at 215-898-0167.

The Office of Inclusion and Engagement

The Office of Inclusion and Engagement is dedicated to maintaining an environment at the Law School that champions inclusivity. It also supports and engages in initiatives and trainings with the wider community of alumni, student, faculty and staff.

Contact the Office of Inclusion and Engagement at inclusion@law.upenn.edu or by calling 215-746-1458.
