

Penn Center for Innovation:

The spring and fall externships allow 2L and 3L students with a proven interest in intellectual property and technology transfer to work directly with the legal team for Penn's commercialization organization, the Penn Center for Innovation (PCI), two or more days per week during an academic semester. Externs will be matched with projects based on their abilities and availability.

Common tasks for externs include:

- Performing patent portfolio analysis and support
- Participating in shadow license agreement negotiations
- Participating in strategy meetings for potential licensing transactions
- Drafting memos on updates to intellectual property laws and novel legal issues
- Drafting memos on university licensing legal topics
- Populating boilerplate license agreements based on term sheets
- Assisting with writing and editing drafting guides for various agreements used at PCI

The work is substantive, and allows the extern to be a true member of the PCI Legal team for the duration of their externship. Externs are also encouraged to attend key meetings and events occurring throughout the University and the community focused on entrepreneurship and innovation.
