610 Kellysha's Perfect Pancake Mix and Recipe

Step aside Aunt Jemima. This is a mix to make the perfect batch of pancakes.

It all began 20 years ago in my best friend's family kitchen. I remember standing next to her father by the stove as he made us pancakes for breakfast, watching the batter defy gravity. My Belgian mother made crepes at home, so I never really experienced this American delicacy before. And oh my, they were so fluffy. I was determined to recreate it, but to my dismay, they never came out right.

Fast forward to my teenage years, and still, there was always something wrong with them. I was successful with ready-made pancake mixes, where I finessed my flipping skills (the key is confidence), but homemade always came out a disaster (flat, pale, just sad). When I reached my early 20's, I decided this was no longer acceptable. After testing out numerous methods, using different ingredients (from egg whites to ricotta), and in need of a creative outlet as I stressed over the LSAT (my roommate called it the 'pancake diet'), I had a breakthrough.

One lucky Penn Law student will now have the unique opportunity to purchase my dry mix, which will come with the necessary wet ingredients and instructions ('the method').

Praise from the Penn Law Community:

Professor David Hoffman, "These are amazing!"

Alex Resisi, "Can you serve these at my wedding?"

Skylar Gu, "What's your secret?"

Amanda Gould, "You don't know what good pancakes are until you've had Schreiber's!"

Joe Ebb, speechless

Karishma Shah, "They're SO fluffy!"

611 Vegan Chocolate Cake

Tasty chocolate, for the juris doctorate.
