1 MS. HABBART: Hi Ted, thank you so much for being 2 here.

3 MR. MIRVIS: It's my pleasure.

4 MS. HABBART: Tell us, at what point did you come 5 into the transaction? Meaning, was the transaction already 6 negotiated by the time you were brought in?

7 MR. MIRVIS: Oh, yeah. Yeah, I think my first 8 substantive involvement in the matter was briefing and arguing 9 the standing motion, which ended up not exactly being pivotal, 10 but it was a very interesting issue. It turned on the fact 11 that Omnicare, at least until relatively late in the process, 12 was not a stockholder of NCS. And even though Delaware, for 13 reasons that are shrouded in the mists of time, has allowed 14 bidders to bring fiduciary duty claims against targets, which 15 is, I suppose necessary but hard to comprehend.

16 MS. HABBART: Yeah, I don't make the sense of that 17 either. #00:01:06#

18 MR. MIRVIS: Yeah, okay. Didn't - we thought we had 19 a shot of getting Omnicare knocked out of the case completely,

1 but it never really worked completely. Plus, there was always 2 the stockholder plaintiffs anyway, so I don't think the case 3 would have litigated differently if we had won or lost the 4 question.

5 MS. HABBART: Let me ask you. What was your first 6 reaction when you saw the complaint and decided to think about 7 your strategy for how you would approach it? #00:01:37#

8 MR. MIRVIS: When I first heard about the matter, it
9 was -- the facts were fully baked. I remember thinking, well, 10 this is a pretty tough case. This is about as locked up as a 11 deal can ever be. I was puzzled by the fact that there was 12 going to be an annual meeting at all. I didn't understand why 13 there was going to be an annual meeting with a preordained
14 result, but then I learned that, apparently Outcalt and Shaw, 15 they didn't have the power to act by written consent and,
16 therefore, there had to be a meeting. Or maybe it was some SEC 17 rule that required there be a meeting.

18 MS. HABBART: Must have been an SEC rule, because I 19 checked the certificate because I thought the same thing: they 20 must have eliminated the power to act by written consent, but 21 they didn't--

22 MR. MIRVIS: Well, that's interesting.

23 MS. HABBART: -- in the certificate. So, it had to 24 have been some other regulatory body. #00:02:29#

1           MR. MIRVIS: Okay. And you know, it was a case from 2 our point of view, from Genesis' point of view, in which NCS 3 was a failing company. It was insolvent. It was in bankruptcy.
4 They were looking at a future in which the equity was going to 5 get nothing, and the bondholders, the debtholders, weren't 6 even going to get - they were going to be made to sacrifice as 7 well. So, our client viewed themselves as having sort of 8 rescued this company and provided at least some payment to the 9 equity holders, every penny of which was a windfall compared 10 to where they had been. So, in return for that, we had an 11 unusually, you know, locked-up, lock, stock, and barrel deal, 12 which precluded any competition - any further competition, and 13 made the vote, kind of a silliness.

14           MS. HABBART: A foregone conclusion. But the truth 15 is, there had been a lot of history and a lot of history with 16 Omnicare and Genesis, which would support the fact that 17 Genesis would say, I need some tough terms, I am not going to 18 be a stalking horse. #00:03:53#

19           MR. MIRVIS: Right, I do remember learning
20 afterward, and not in real time, that a lot of this was driven 21 by the prior experience between Genesis and Omnicare in 22 bidding for another company. And that's often - things like 23 that I think are often lost sight of when you go back and look 24 at these facts. I mean CEOs and boards of directors are real,

1 live human beings. And if they have had experiences where they 2 think they got the short end of the stick, driven by somebody 3 else previously, they are going to try very hard not to be 4 made a fool of again. And, I think, no doubt that drove a lot 5 of the deal terms in this situation.

6 MS. HABBART: I don't disagree that that should have 7 been the case. And because they didn't seem to play ethically
8 -- Omnicare - when you go back and look at their behavior.
9 But, whether it was ethically or not, and that's up for 10 debate, is that the fact that the best they were going to 11 offer was something that sailed out of bankruptcy court and 12 you know, your client was saving the company in many ways.

13 #00:05:04#

14 MR. MIRVIS: Right. And the price we wanted to 15 extract for that was maximum deal certainty. And you know this 16 was, Omnicare was - this case was decided at a time where - 17 2003 -- I suspect that the last statement from the Delaware 18 Supreme Court prior to that was probably either - either or 19 both -- of Time Warner and QVC and that was informing a lot of 20 the way people on the buy side, and on the defending defensive 21 measure side of these cases were viewing the world. You know, 22 there had never been a case - I think Omnicare was actually 23 the first case that made it clear that defensive measures in a 24 sale were going to be viewed with enhanced scrutiny under

1 Unocal. And that they were going to be separated out. You
2 could make - we made an argument that, under Time Warner, that 3 that was inconsistent with Time Warner. Time Warner sort of 4 glommed everything together. When Time Warner held that a 5 stock-for-stock merger was a pure business decision, it sort 6 of gave the back of the hand to the dry up fees and whatever 7 the other defensive measures were here. In this case, the 8 defensive measures sort of got pulled out, partly because they 9 were structurally different; they were in a separate 10 agreement. But they were pulled out and put under a separate 11 microscope. And that, from a litigator's point of view, that 12 made it harder to defend.

13 MS. HABBART: I'll bet. And that ties in with a 14 question that I have always had is why they needed to have the 15 company a party to the voting agreements in the first 16 instance, but we'll need some of the strategic persons 17 involved with the negotiations to find out what their thinking 18 was behind that. #00:07:04#

19 MR. MIRVIS: I know ... sometimes the litigators 20 don't see the sausage getting made.

21 MS. HABBART: No, you really don't. You're stuck
22 with whatever is handed to you, right? But so, your opinion 23 was - or, your initial reaction was, we're doing a good thing.
24 We're representing a company that's going in there and doing a

1 good thing and making a reasonable offer with terms that make 2 sense in the context. And what's the problem? #00:07:29#

3 MR. MIRVIS: But we had - you had an independent
4 board, clearly fully-informed and acting deliberately. No 5 conflicting interests. More than that, you had Outcalt and 6 Shaw with, not just the majority of the voting power under a 7 dual-class structure, which wasn't really focused on that much 8 in the case, that their voting power came not from their 9 economics, but they were the largest, single economic owners
10 of the company. And they had no reason to sell for anything 11 but the best price they could get.

12 MS. HABBART: No.

13 MR. MIRVIS: And they took our deal, and they didn't 14 - they took our deal, they took our - accepted our exclusivity 15 demands, and they didn't think it was necessary to risk that 16 in order to see what Omnicare might or might not be willing to 17 do, particularly in the way that Omnicare had first come to 18 them with, I don't remember what it was called in the opinion 19 - was it called low-ball or no-ball, or something, but-

20 MS. HABBART: It was probably selling the asset out 21 of the bankruptcy court- #00:08:25#

22 MR. MIRVIS: Yeah, they were doing an asset sale
23 where the debt wasn't even going to get fully paid, and equity 24 would have gotten zip. So, to that degree, we would have

1 thought, you know, we were on the side of the angels insofar 2 as we were being attacked by stockholders with concerns.

3 MS. HABBART: Were you surprised? #00:08:41#

4 MR. MIRVIS: Surprised that there as a challenge?
5 No. I mean there was always a challenge. But Omnicare, which 6 was - to some degree, a Johnny come lately with a higher 7 price. What our position was, okay, what was done wrong here?
8 Where was the violation? We didn't see one. You know, unless - 9 and the way we tried to frame the issue was, unless Delaware 10 is going to say that the highest price has to always win, even 11 if nothing that preceded it can be really shown to have been a 12 breach of duty, then we didn't see how we could be stopped.
13 And that's why the decision, from the Supreme Court - the 14 decision in the Court of Chancery was sort of mainline,
15 Delaware, intense scrutiny, heavy record, but intense scrutiny
16 of everything that the board did. There was a full discovery 17 record of everything that happened. There were no mysteries, 18 no surprises. And I thought a really remarkable decision from 19 the Court of Chancery. I wasn't surprised that they appealed, 20 because, you know, why not? I mean they had one thing going 21 for them on the appeal.

22 MS. HABBART: What did you think that was?

23 #00:09:59#

24 MR. MIRVIS: A higher price on the table.

1 MS. HABBART: Yeah, but that came after the fact.

2 MR. MIRVIS: Understood, but you know, the cynical 3 people have often said that there's really only two rules in 4 Delaware in takeover cases. Rule number one, you never get an 5 injunction if you don't have a higher price. And number two, 6 you always get an injunction if you have a higher price. Of 7 course, the exception that proves the rule is Time Warner, 8 arguably. But we didn't - we thought that was besides lawless, 9 you know, kind of a terrible policy idea. But we turned out to 10 be wrong. I mean I was, as we have chatted before, I mean my 11 principle involvement was in the charter issue, which-

12 MS. HABBART: We should - we'll get to that in a 13 minute. #00:10:51#

14 MR. MIRVIS: Which has been buried under a lot of 15 time and that's probably where it should stay. But on the 16 fiduciary issue, in a stock-for-stock deal, to lose on the 17 ground that the defensive measures violated Unocal; that was 18 news to us. And I must say, the first time I read this 19 opinion, and I read it again because I thought maybe I was 20 misremembering it, the statement in the majority opinion that 21 "the latitude a board will have in either maintaining or using 22 defensive devices adopted to protect a merger, will vary 23 according to the degree of benefit or detriment to the 24 stockholders' interest that is presented by the value or terms

1 of the subsequent competing transaction." When I read that 2 for the first time, I went back and read it again, and I 3 didn't understand it.

4 MS. HABBART: Because why is a board being judged by 5 something that comes after the fact? #00:11:58#

6 MR. MIRVIS: Yeah, and so, basically... I mean, I 7 understood the idea, which is this case is often cited for, 8 the directors' duties are unremitting. That's all fine. But 9 the directors of NCS and, you know, we weren't being 10 charitable. We made them make a decision and they made it. And 11 they were held to have breached their fiduciary duties, not 12 because of anything - if the clock had stopped-

13 MS. HABBART: They would have been fine.

14 MR. MIRVIS: -- at that point in time, there'd be no 15 claim at all. The claim, they became, that what they did 16 turned out to be a breach of fiduciary duty not because of 17 anything they had done, did, knew, or could possibly have 18 foreseen, but because Omnicare later decided to throw more 19 money on the table? That was news to us. And the shocking 20 thing about this - well, shocking is a big word - surprising
21 thing about this opinion is this is the first opinion I know 22 of, and maybe to this day, that sort of says Delaware is 23 saying there are certain things that are just not in the 24 directors' toolbox. You just can't do it. You just can't sign

1 a merger agreement without a fiduciary out, in which the vote
2 is preordained by voting agreements.

3 MS. HABBART: Under any circumstances. #00:13:18#

4 MR. MIRVIS: Full stop. And of course, that was the 5 point of the dissents. And you know, back in 2003, dissents in 6 corporate law cases were-

7 MS. HABBART: Rare.

8 MR. MIRVIS: -- really almost unheard of.

9 MS. HABBART: That was making a big statement; you 10 had two justices dissent-

11 MR. MIRVIS: Two - and one by the Chief. It was a 12 big deal. It didn't help us at all, but it was nice to read.

13 MS. HABBART: No. Did it trouble you at all that you 14 didn't get a written decision from the court until four months 15 after the order? #00:13:48#

16 MR. MIRVIS: Well, did it trouble us?

17 MS. HABBART: Well, the die was cast, but were you 18 surprised-

19 MR. MIRVIS: But we knew we lost, and we had a - I 20 forgot, exactly what was in the order at the time. We had some 21 idea why we had lost. I mean we knew we had lost because the 22 deal was completely locked up. But I couldn't, for the life of 23 me, figure out how they were going to state that in a

1 doctrinally coherent way. And what were they going to find? I
2 mean they weren't going to reverse - and they did not reverse-

3 MS. HABBART: They accepted, in fact, all the 4 findings- #00:14:22#

5 MR. MIRVIS: Correct ... correct.

6 MS. HABBART: -- the Court of Chancery.

7 MR. MIRVIS: Right. And yet found that it was a new 8 idea. It was just a new idea. Right, wrong, or indifferent, it 9 was clearly new to say there are certain things directors
10 can't do, even if they act with pure heart on a fully-informed 11 basis without any conflict in a transaction designed to get 12 the greatest value for the equity. You just can't do certain 13 things. Okay?

14 MS. HABBART: All right, I look at that and say, 15 that really is something that would preclude some people from 16 wanting to be first at the table, because, no matter what they 17 do and no matter how well they negotiate, somebody after the 18 fact can come in, and the board is responsible to have to 19 talk to them. #00:15:12#

20 MR. MIRVIS: Well, you raise an interesting 21 question. I don't know whether people think of it from the 22 interloper's point of view. How comfortable would you be if 23 you were in Omnicare's shoes in the next case, saying, well, I

1 can just wait? I don't have to participate - because they had 2 every opportunity to participate-

3 MS. HABBART: Yeah, they sure did.

4 MR. MIRVIS: -- I can just sit back, be cute, make 5 all kind of demands about due diligence and things like that 6 that make my offer unattractive. Smoke out what's the - what 7 bid am I going to get from my competitor. Let them lock it up
8 any which way they want, and then I will just put a higher bid 9 on the table and win. I don't think people thought that way, 10 necessarily, afterward. And don't forget, there was, as you 11 know, a firestorm of statements, including statements from 12 members of the court, that this was going to be a highly 13 confined case. And then, there were a couple of CLE programs; 14 people used words like "life of a fruit fly."

15 MS. HABBART: But that was the dissent. Did the 16 majority - and I can't recall them ever saying that it was 17 based on the confines of the facts and issues -- therefore, 18 why wouldn't you take the position of Omnicare next time
19 around? I think I might roll that die. #00:16:22#

20 MR. MIRVIS: Okay, I hear you. Oh, that's the beauty 21 of the common law, right? One case at a time.

22 MS. HABBART: That's exactly right. And it just 23 seems as if, when we were looking at the review of the 24 defensive measures, the history of both NCS and Genesis with

1 Omnicare, we would have thought would have helped carry the 2 day? #00:16:44#

3 MR. MIRVIS: Yeah.

4 MS. HABBART: But can we shift for one moment and go 5 back to that charter issue? Because it's interesting, our 6 former Vice Chancellor, he thought, frankly, that that was the 7 most intellectually challenging issue. He enjoyed that issue.
8 #00:17:00#

9 MR. MIRVIS: It was a fascinating issue. And I don't 10 have it in front of mind, but it involved what I love the 11 most, which is careful reading of charter language and trying 12 to figure out how they apply in situations that probably you 13 don't have any real basis to say, or anybody had thought of at 14 the time, the thing happened. But the notion that by signing 15 the voting agreement, Outcalt and Shaw should have gone from 16 high vote to low vote never made any sense to me. But there 17 was traction to the other side. It wasn't like they had 18 nothing to say. It wasn't a silly argument; it was a, you 19 know, a swing for the fences argument. It got—

20 MS. HABBART: Remember the "in connection with 21 proxy"? I remember my first reaction was, I don't follow that—22 #00:17:48#

23 MR. MIRVIS: But you know, you wonder sometimes why 24 people raise certain arguments in cases. Was one of the

1 purposes of Omnicare in raising that argument to sort of put 2 greater pressure on the fiduciary point? I mean, were they 3 saying look, if you're not going to rule for us on the 4 fiduciary point, you can still get the stockholders a better
5 deal by just making a narrow decision based on this charter
6 provision. Who knows?

7 MS. HABBART: No, but you're right about that.

8 MR. MIRVIS: Could be. That could be.

9 MS. HABBART: I'd love to go back and ask the Vice 10 Chancellor how that influenced him, if it did. And I will - 11 give a simpler option, thank you. Now, that's interesting. And 12 it was - and frankly, a lot of that discussion, as well, where 13 they talked about transfer. You can read agreements all the 14 time that don't properly define transfer for purposes of the 15 agreements at issue and limited partnership agreements and LLC 16 agreements, they really fail to- #00:18:55#

17 MR. MIRVIS: Yeah, words are messy things, but we 18 don't have a lot of alternatives-

19 MS. HABBART: Words are very messy ... yes, that's 20 correct. Anything else you want to say about the charter
21 issue? How about the standing issue? You had said [inaudible]
22 -- #00:19:08#

23 MR. MIRVIS: The standing issue was an interesting 24 one. I enjoyed that a lot also, even though it - nobody ever

1 really thought it was going to change the course of the 2 litigation. But, you know, we had argued -- I say "we," I mean 3 my firm had argued, I think it was in Revlon, perhaps, for the 4 first time, or right around the time of Revlon, which would 5 have been '85 -- '84, '85 -- that bidders shouldn't be allowed 6 to raise fiduciary issues. That - and we had a kind of a very 7 tight, doctrinal kind of argument. You know, fiduciary duty 8 issues should only be raised by people who were on the same
9 page as the cestui que trusts, or whatever they - the English 10 words or something - the people were the beneficiaries of the 11 fiduciary duty. While the bidder is the exact opposite; the 12 bidder is the buyer. The buyer has a direct conflict with the 13 seller. Why should the bidder be able to litigate fiduciary 14 issues that are designed to benefit the selling stockholders?
15 It didn't make a lot of sense to us. We never won that issue.
16 And the way Delaware sort of - and not just Delaware, but 17 other states have done the same thing, have sort of [alighted] 18 the issues is to say, well, the bidder at least has to have 19 the fig leaf of owning shares in the company.

20 MS. HABBART: At the time. #00:20:34#

21 MR. MIRVIS: At the time of the conduct complained 22 of.

23 MS. HABBART: Right.

1           MR. MIRVIS: Now, with the contemporaneous ownership
2 rule, of course, comes out of the derivative law context. Now, 3 once you talk about derivative law context, you have to ask 4 the question, well, is the plaintiff an adequate 5 representative? Well, how in the world is a bidder an adequate
6 representative for the selling stockholders? Well, but - I 7 think it was really almost like a rule of necessity. Hard to 8 imagine all the cases that ran from '84 until, well, until 9 today, frankly. Suppose Delaware would have gone the other 10 way? Suppose Delaware would have said, you know what? Bidders
11 don't have standing to assert fiduciary claims against targets
12 and their directors. Well, we would live in - that would be a 13 true alternative universe. There would still be the 14 stockholder plaintiffs, but the stockholder plaintiffs, more 15 so then than now, didn't have the resources to litigate these 16 kind of cases. These were knockout, drag-out cases. The good 17 thing about them, of course, is they were pre-email. None of 18 these cases could be litigated today. Impossible.

19           MS. HABBART: Why do you say that? #00:21:57#

20           MR. MIRVIS: Oh, because the sheer burden -- crunch 21 of - there aren't enough human beings or contract lawyers on 22 this planet to review the emails that would have had to have 23 been collected and reviewed to litigate cases like Revlon, 24 Unocal, Newmont, Time Warner, QVC, on anything like the 1 expedited timeframes, which were required to be litigated for 2 those cases to be decided. I do not know what would happen if 3 there was a preliminary injunction practice in a hostile 4 takeover case in which somebody needed to have a preliminary 5 injunction hearing and what was the timing in those cases?

6 Between 20 and 60 days?

7 MS. HABBART: Correct.

8 MR. MIRVIS: You couldn't do it. You simply couldn't 9 do it. And I don't care how many lawyers you threw at it. I 10 don't care how much money you spent on vendors. You could not 11 possibly gather, review, produce, that number of emails. And 12 even if you said, okay, all rules are off, I just have to try 13 this case, just produce everything. Produce their inboxes.

14 MS. HABBART: You can't do that. #00:23:10#

15 MR. MIRVIS: Well, first, you can't do that. But not 16 only that, you can't review it. It's just not possible on 17 either side of the case. So, email has done - the best thing 18 email has done is it waited long enough to come along until we 19 had a firm grounding of Delaware takeover doctrine. Otherwise, 20 we never would have - and I firmly - I truly, truly believe 21 that.

22 MS. HABBART: Well, do you have a position today
23 about emails?

24 MR. MIRVIS: Oh, sure.

1 MS. HABBART: What is your position? #00:23:36#

2 MR. MIRVIS: It's seven words to save America:
3 Delaware should adopt a statute: an email is not a document. I 4 don't have a co-sponsor for that legislation yet, but I'd be 5 happy to have one.

6 MS. HABBART: Well, we'll take it under 7 consideration at the council. See if we can get it, because I
8 agree with you and I think people don't put the level of care
9 in emails that they would in ... a paper document. #00:24:03#

10 MR. MIRVIS: And they never will; they never will.
11 Because email is - the reason that they're not documents is 12 they're really spoken words caught on a page.

13 MS. HABBART: But how about a text message?

14 MR. MIRVIS: Worse. Worse. And no matter - you look, 15 we, ourselves, right? Everyone thinks they're funny on emails.
16 They think they're hilarious in text. To say nothing of 17 ephemeral messages like Snapchat, and now there's-

18 MS. HABBART: WhatsApp-

19 MR. MIRVIS: WhatsApp and also direct Tweets - are a 20 new subject of discovery. So, this is a never-ending miasma, 21 if that's a word.

22 MS. HABBART: Well, and I suppose those, others 23 would say that those unmeasured responses are showing you what 24 the real intent was. But then again, agreements always say

1 you're doing it based on the terms written herein and nothing 2 else. #00:25:06#

3 MR. MIRVIS: I would agree that candid emails often 4 reveal truth, but they reveal truth only about the speaker and 5 their influence in an overall construction of the narrative is 6 -- the prejudicial effect of their influence outweighs their 7 usefulness. If you have an email that supports a certain 8 narrative, it could be from a third-level person talking to 9 somebody else who is not a decision-maker, but that can stink
10 up a case and affect a court's view of a board-level decision 11 that's very hard to get rid of. So, I don't know what the real 12 answer is other than my statute, which ain't going anywhere.

13 MS. HABBART: Email is not a document. That's email 14 plus everything else. #00:25:56#

15 MR. MIRVIS: Well, then, I'll define the word--

16 MS. HABBART: Text, yeah. We'll have to get it 17 really broad. But I understand that challenge. And, going back 18 to the dissent, when you knew that two justices, including the 19 Chief Justice, dissented, that really sent a mixed message to 20 the public. And like you said, would you have been Omnicare 21 and after the fact try the same set of circumstances again.
22 How did that temper your advice to clients, if at all, after 23 this decisions? #00:26:35#

1 MR. MIRVIS: Well, that's a very good question 2 because, you know, the word got out right away, once we had 3 these opinions, and then you had comments and CLE programs of 4 people saying, "Omnicare will have the life of a fruit fly. It 5 will never happen again." I get calls from either my corporate 6 partners or other people saying, "well, we want to do this 7 transaction, and we want to do A, B, and C; and it was exactly 8 like Omnicare." And I say, "well, that's Omnicare. You can't 9 do that." They say, "what do you mean you can't do that?" That 10 decision-

11 MS. HABBART: Look at the dissent.

12 MR. MIRVIS: Yeah, that decision is not right. I 13 said, "well, it may not be right, but if you're going to have 14 to litigate in the first instance in the Delaware Court of 15 Chancery, what's the Delaware Court of Chancery supposed to 16 say? That the majority opinion is not the law of Delaware?"

17 MS. HABBART: It can't.

18 MR. MIRVIS: And you look for ways around it. People 19 look for things like acting by written consent. And there was 20 a bench ruling that said, "yeah, that's different." That's 21 pretty hard to understand, particularly if there was a 22 contract obligating the person to act by written consent
23 shortly afterward-

24 MS. HABBART: It's form over substance. #00:27:40#

1 MR. MIRVIS: -- hard to understand. But at the end
2 of the day, the one change is, everybody now - I don't think 3 I've seen a merger agreement since Omnicare that doesn't have 4 a fiduciary out, not just for the right to change a 5 recommendation, but you can't couple it with a force the vote 6 under 251. I don't know that that's a bad thing. I think that, 7 what it's actually done is, I think, it's put a lot of the 8 pressure on the post-signing period. People have gotten more 9 aggressive than they might otherwise have gotten in doing one-10 off transactions, that is with a soft market canvass or maybe 11 even no market canvass. If they have a fiduciary out, coupled 12 with either a go-shop period or some period of time in which 13 it's free for other bidders to emerge. And I fully understand 14 the contrary argument, which was any deal that's subject to a 15 stockholder vote that's not locked up is a fiduciary out, 16 whether it's in the agreement or not. Because all someone has 17 to do is come along and make a higher bid and you're just not 18 going to get the vote.

19 MS. HABBART: Exactly. #00:28:52#

20 MR. MIRVIS: But, look, the world didn't fall apart
21 because of Omnicare. The deal market certainly didn't dry up.
22 You know, will we know how many deals didn't get done because 23 of Omnicare? No, we'll never know. If you asked me to guess, 24 do I think it's a lot? No, I think it's probably none. But

1 what was rattling about the opinion and, still rereading it 2 today, is rattling about the opinion is sort of the point that 3 Chief Justice Steele, subsequently Chief Justice Steele, 4 hammered home in his concurring dissent, which was, you have 5 announced here a prescriptive rule. There is something you
6 simply can't do no matter what the circumstance. No matter 7 what the context. And that was very un-Delawarean. And that's 8 what made this opinion surprising, to some degree unnerving, 9 and you just sort of wondered, when you get an opinion like 10 this that -- it's obviously very hard to predict how a court 11 is going to view the set of facts. But this court viewed the 12 set of facts the same way the Court of Chancery viewed the set 13 of facts; it adopted the findings of the Court of Chancery--

14 MS. HABBART: Which was very - yes, you're right.

15 #00:30:05#

16 MR. MIRVIS: And yet, announced a rule that certain 17 things you just can't do. Well, that was startling, and it 18 made people wonder for a while of what else are we going to 19 find we just can't do? And, but, you know, in the great common 20 law tradition, things sort of got righted, and the sky didn't 21 fall, the world didn't end, and corporate lawyers just 22 structured around a lot of this and litigators found clever 23 ways to win cases no matter what.

1 MS. HABBART: So, let me ask you something. There 2 was a point in time where, notwithstanding the no-shop clause, 3 that Genesis permitted NCS to speak with Omnicare. Do you have 4 any sense of why that was done? Or again, that was before your 5 time? #00:31:02#

6 MR. MIRVIS: It was before my time, but I would 7 suspect, and you can confirm this with the transactional 8 lawyers. I may be completely wrong. I suspect the reason is 9 probably a fear that if they - you know, even when you have a 10 right, you also know that asserting it might not look great in 11 the litigation. And sometimes you might feel like - and I 12 don't know that that's the case here, but there are other 13 situations I have been involved in that are like this where 14 people say, "well, why should we let this happen? We have the 15 right not to let it happen." And you say, "well, yes, you have 16 the right not to let it happen. We think you're right and you 17 have a perfectly legitimate basis not to let it happen, but 18 think about how it's going to play in a courtroom. And, if you 19 let the person talk, and they got nothing to say, that's a 20 whole lot better as a record than not letting them talk." I 21 don't know that's what happened here, but there are many 22 situations in which people - that's how situations play out.
23 One example is don't ask, don't waive, which people put into 24 agreements all the time, frankly, no matter how many times the

1 courts say they don't like them or maybe they're even, per se, 2 no good, people are going to put them in. And then, the 3 question comes, okay, once you sign the merger agreement, even 4 if it the don't ask, don't waive, don't fall by their own 5 terms, shouldn't you release those people from the don't ask, 6 don't waive? It's a very similar kind of dynamic. Clients will 7 say, "well, why do I have to do that? Can you tell me it's 8 definitely illegal?" No, it's not definitely illegal, not just 9 definitely illegal. But it's -- people don't like them. There 10 are a lot of judges don't like them. You're going to get - 11 you're going to at least get a disclosure claim about them.
12 Why don't you disclose this? Things like that. And you say, 13 "well, we'll deal with that if it happens." Okay. You know, 14 there's still a lot of judgements you have to make even after 15 the case - even after facts look like they're fully baked;
16 they're not often out of the oven yet.

17 MS. HABBART: Yeah, and I still - I find that most 18 troubling is the idea that yes, okay, even if you say you 19 always have to have a fiduciary out, everything was being 20 analyzed by activity that took place after the merger
21 agreement was entered into, and I just don't know how you -
22 it's just not a good way to do business. #00:33:36#

23 MR. MIRVIS: You could chalk it up to hard cases 24 make hard law. That's what I think happened here. It's very 1 tough for a court - when the court knows that by signing an 2 order, stockholders will get more money, that's a huge amount 3 of pressure. A huge amount of pressure. I'm not so cynical as 4 to say a higher bid will always flush away everything that 5 came before it. But, if I was a judge, and someone saying 6 look, the stockholder is going to get 50-percent or 30-percent 7 or 20-percent more value if you sign this order striking down

8 these defenses. Not an easy call.

9 MS. HABBART: No, not an easy call at all, but what 10 do they say? A deal should be a deal. One would think-

11 MR. MIRVIS: No argument here.

12 MS. HABBART: So, speaking of the deal, you were 13 supposed to get six-million breakup fee, your client. You got 14 25. Kudos to you, but do you have any idea what the dynamics 15 were there? #00:34:35#

16 MR. MIRVIS: I have a glimmer of a memory on that.
17 The glimmer of a memory on that is Omnicare very much didn't 18 want to have any further litigation. And I don't remember 19 exactly what the hook was, but there was some - we had a 20 prospect of asserting some kind of a claim if this wasn't 21 resolved quickly. And they wanted it resolved quickly. And I 22 can't put the pieces together in my head, but speed had a lot 23 to do with it.

24 MS. HABBART: And they were willing to pay the 25.

1 MR. MIRVIS: Yes.

2 MS. HABBART: And query whether the 25 really is 3 enough compensation for time, aggravation, legal fees-

4 MR. MIRVIS: Oh, it's probably not-

5 MS. HABBART: -- all that-

6 MR. MIRVIS: -- oh, it was certainly not.

7 MS. HABBART: It seems like a drop in the bucket-

8 MR. MIRVIS: Yeah, also, the reason - one of the 9 reasons people have - get fees like this is when they have 10 gone out into the marketplace and done a transaction that they 11 don't close, they have exposed their business strategy to the 12 world. And that's - you can't reasonably determine the cost of 13 that, but it ain't nothing. It's something. And that's one of 14 the reasons people insist on high breakup fees. Because once 15 we tell the world this is the direction in which we plan to 16 go, and we're thwarted from doing it, you run the risk of 17 being positioned as a damaged company, and that's part of the 18 reason for that level of compensation.

19 MS. HABBART: Thank you so much, Ted. This was a 20 great help, and I will follow up with your transaction 21 partner.

22 MR. MIRVIS: Great ... always great to be in 23 Wilmington. Thank you.

24 MS. HABBART: You're welcome.
