Comment responses

9. Is there any special preparation or background necessary to take this course?

Comments
A background in statistics or econometrics would certainly be very beneficial, but it is by no means necessary.
No.
none
No

10. Comment on the instructor's (Jonathan Klick) stimulation of interest in the subject matter and independent thought.

Comments
Professor Klick is very enjoyable to listen to. He doesn't lecture so much as talk or converse with the class, which makes learning the material more enjoyable.
First, I think Professor Klick has picked very interesting topics for the class. Second, Professor Klick is very good at explaining abstract law and economics issues. Last but not least, Professor Klick has great sense of humor. All of the above have stimulated my interest in the subject. In the future, I would love to learn more about Law & Econ.

11. Comment on the instructor (Jonathan Klick) with respect to attitude toward students and accessibility outside of class.

Comments
He's very accessible outside of class, even outside of his assigned office hours.
Professor Klick is very kind to students. Also, he is very accessible. He always welcome us to talk to him or ask questions after class or during weekly office hours.

12. Comment on the strengths and weaknesses of the course. How could it be improved?

Comments
A good chunk of most of the readings is very inaccessible to someone without a background in stats/econometrics. This can't really be avoided, since empirical studies are the core of the course, but it is a bit daunting.
I think the best thing of this course is that you not only learn about how to review empirical studies, but also have the option to write a mini empiric study yourself.

13. Other comments.

Comments
The course is a far cry from the standard legal class. There are no cases and no doctrinal concepts. You basically read a bunch of empirical studies and then Professor Klick explains them in class. The class is a welcome break from the normal law school class routine.
Thank you Professor! I like the class a lot!
Absolutely great! Klick is wonderful and the material incredibly interesting.
