Alejandra Parra Novoa L'20

Alejandra Parra is an LL.M. candidate at Penn Law. She is a Chilean attorney and earned her Bachelor of Law at Universidad de Chile. Prior to joining the LL.M., she led the Business and Human Rights (BHR) section for the South America Regional Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights (2015-2019). In this position, she worked towards the promotion and protection of the rights of women, indigenous peoples, and environmental human rights defenders, among others, in the context of corporate accountability. She is also part of the global BHR Scholars Association. Before entering the UN, Alejandra worked as a litigator in a law firm and as a legal clinic teaching assistant.
