Latham & Watkins is a full-service international law firm with more than 2,000 lawyers in 31 offices around the world. The founders of Latham & Watkins instilled an ethic of hard work, commitment and quality that endures today and has nurtured the firm’s dramatic growth into one of the world’s premier business law firms. With that growth, we have built internationally recognized practices in a wide spectrum of transactional, corporate, litigation and regulatory areas. Our success is grounded in our commitment to the collaborative process, and reaches across global offices and practices to draw upon our deep subject matter experience. This, along with an abiding commitment to teamwork, has led to a powerful tradition of creative lawyering.

Lisa Berger
Penn Law, Class of 2010
“It was clear to me that Latham has great people doing great work. That, coupled with the unassigned program - which lets associates get work from different departments, both as a summer associate and during the initial years of practice - made Latham the obvious choice.”

Bobby Staloff
Penn Law, Class of 2011
“I chose Latham because it offers the rare opportunity to work with and learn from not just the best lawyers around, but the best people as well.”

Natalie Georges
Penn Law, Class of 2011
“I chose Latham because it has a culture that reminds me very much of Penn Law. The lawyers I met during the interview process were down to earth, passionate about the work they did and excited to welcome new associates into the firm.”

Bobbi-Jo Dobush
Penn Law, Class of 2011
“I chose Latham for the same reasons I chose Penn; both are extremely up front and transparent. Like Penn, Latham gives me the support I need to foster my diverse interests. At Latham my work is equally appreciated whether it is for paying or pro bono clients.”

Navin Pal
Penn Law, Class of 2011
Wharton, Class of 2011
“The Unassigned Program made Latham an easy choice. For a confused law student like me, it was a daunting prospect to make an uninformed choice that might affect the rest of my career. I like being able to make the most of a large law firm that practices in so many areas of law.”

Zhao Yang
Penn Law, Class of 2011
“Out of everyone I met during the recruiting process, I had the best conversations with Latham lawyers and felt that the firm, with its dedication to maintaining a collegial, positive work environment, would be a great place to work. (I can report that my initial instincts were spot-on!)”
